Arabs Vote To Resume War When Truce Ends

Military Leaders Reject Extension Of Truce, Plan Full-Scale Drive

Cairo, Egypt, July 5 (U.P.).—The powerful military committee of the Arab League voted today to reject any proposal to extend the truce in Palestine and to resume full-scale fighting at 2 a. m. (EDT), Friday.

Informants said the committee, including higher-ranking army commanders, coordinated all plans for a big campaign in Palestine and considered naming King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan supreme commander of the armies of the seven Arab nations.

Well informed sources said the political committee of the Arab League approved a proposal by the military committee to relieve the armies in Palestine of administrative duties in occupied Jewish settlements.

Targets Reported Selected

It was suggested that this bring back into the limelight Haj Amin el-Husseini, Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and No. 1 enemy of the Jews, who has political machinery in Palestine and might take over most administrative duties.

It was reported the military committee at a three-hour meeting outlined numbers and strength of the forces under the various Arab military commanders and agreed on operational targets for a resumption of the war.

New Clashes Reported

A pooled dispatch from American correspondents in Jerusalem said the cease-fire was broken in a new sector of Jerusalem last night and today and Israeli forces in the Holy City have begun digging in for an expected all-out resumption of war.

Mortars and machine guns blazed across a 15-yard front between Jewish positions on Mount Zion and Arabs in the old city around midnight and continued sporadically into the morning.

Bernadotte Seeking Extension of Truce

Cairo, July 5 (AP).—Count Folke Bernadotte formally sought Jewish and Arab agreement today on extending the Palestine truce.

He also proposed the demilitarization of Jerusalem and Haifa port.

The United Nations mediator took these steps as both Jews and Arabs were authoritatively reported to have rejected his partition plan for a permanent Palestine peace.

The four-week truce arranged by Bernadotte ends Friday. He said if the Jews and Arabs accept extension in principle, discussions will be held as to its length.

Bernadotte appeared hopeful he would gain the extension and obtain conditions under which peace talks could be continued.

Forty-nine persons have been arrested.

Armed police, including plain-clothes men, were patrolling the troubled areas in strength as tension remains high.

The rioting started over a complaint that a pickpocket was at work in a streetcar.

Steel Output Threatened

Strike Is Called for Today In Captive Soft Coal Mines

By the United Press

A "no-contract, no-work" coal strike is scheduled to start in the steel industry's "captive" bituminous mines at 6 a. m. today, when the 40,000 miners end their annual 10-day vacation.

The companies have refused to accept a union shop provision in the 1948 contract already signed by "commercial" operators, who represent about 65 per cent of the industry.

The steel firms say the provision violates the Taft-Hartley law. They have filed unfair labor practices charges with the National Labor Relations Board against the union and its president, John L. Lewis.

The firms agreed to the money terms of the agreement, and they posted notices at pit heads of their captive mines offering to pay the miners the new benefits if they report to work today. These amount to $1 a day pay increase and a hike from 10 to 20 cents a ton in contributions to the union welfare fund.

The steel companies have a 41-day supply of soft coal on hand,

Reds Predict All-Winter Blockade

From Press Dispatches

Berlin, July 5.—German Communists tonight formally demanded that the western Allies get out of Berlin. This demand was coupled with a Communist assertion that the Soviet blockade of Berlin would last through the winter.

At the same time, the Russians put out the broadest hint yet that the 17-day blockade is aimed at starting new four-power talks on Germany.

The three prime developments came as the United States, Britain and France prepared a joint note to the Soviet Union protesting the Berlin stalemate. It was expected to be delivered to Moscow Tuesday or Wednesday.

Day's Developments

The developments came as follows:

1. German delegates to a meeting of the Communist-controlled Socialist Unity Party formally demanded that "Greater Berlin" be joined with Soviet-occupied eastern Germany and that the western Allies leave Berlin. They also demanded that the new western currency be abolished in Berlin.

The demand to "get out of Berlin" was made in resolutions presented by Berlin Communist leader Hermann Matern.

2. The Russian-licensed German Vorwaerts asserted for the first time today that the blockade of Berlin would last through the winter and predicted that winter fog and storms would cripple the western air supply line.

3. The Soviet-licensed Nacht Express declared that successful four-power talks on Germany automatically would clarify the Berlin situation.

New Propaganda Campaign

Vorwaerts took the lead in the new Russian propaganda campaign to convince the Germans that the blockade will continue through the winter and bring great misery to the 2,500,000 Germans in the western sectors.

In what was interpreted as a deliberate attempt to scare people into hoarding, which will add to the general chaos, the paper advised Germans to "take precautions against the onset of winter."

A Western supply expert said from the technical viewpoint the "irreducible minimum" supply for Berlin's three western sectors could be brought in by air the year around "if the Western Allies are

Holiday Vacation Crowds Come Back To 95-Degree Heat; No Relief Due Today

Hot, tired and ruffled Washingtonians returned or were en route home last night, wondering if the three-day weekend were worth the homecoming.

They drove in on streets that had taken the sun's heat all day and were giving it back to them. They stepped out of buses and trains and wrestled luggage through other steaming travelers. A favored minority disembarked reluctantly from passenger planes.

At home, one person was reported to have drowned when a boat capsized in the Potomac about one mile above Great Falls; one woman was overcome in the city by the 95-degree heat, and at least three persons were treated at the hospitals for fireworks burns.

The weatherman promised no relief from the heat. The warmth Washingtonians had sought to elude had apparently only been building up for their homecoming. An overnight low of 74 degrees awaited them, the weatherman said. Today, he added, would be continued hot and humid, with a temperature in the mid-90's.

The Great Falls drowning report proved a puzzler to police. No body had been recovered by nightfall when grappling operations were dropped.

The incident first had been reported by a woman who said she saw a rowboat capsize and sink.

Two youths later told police that the drowning victim was Donald Dasher, 21, of Fairfax Station, Va., a friend who was with them at the river.

Yesterday's heat victim was identified at Freedmen's Hospital as Eleanor Gibbs of 1825 New Hampshire ave. nw., who was brought there semiconscious in a taxicab. She was treated and sent home.

Victims of fireworks were Patrick Wilson, 8, of 622 Half st. ne., and Gloria Levinson, 22, of 3905 Ames st. ne., both treated at Casualty Hospital; and Frances Bower, 12, of 4832 Wheeler rd., Oxon Hill, Md., treated at Providence Hospital. Each suffered burns of the left hand.

Those who stayed at home took yesterday in its stride. And the day's stride was a siesta waltz, timed to a virtually breezeless day when the thermometer climbed to 95 by 4:50 p. m. Even after that it was in no hurry to cool off.

The celebration at the Monument last night was the climax, both for those who stayed at home and those who left their seashore, mountain and country retreats in

Actress Found in Bathroom

Carole Landis Kills Herself, Leaves Note to Her Mother

Hollywood, July 5 (U.P.).—Blonde Actress Carole Landis, the screen's original sweater girl, committed suicide today. She was found dead in her luxurious Brentwood home by Actor Rex Harrison.

Harrison told police he found the long-legged beauty lying on the bathroom floor. She was curled up on her side, her cheek resting on a jewel box. In one hand she clutched an envelope containing one white pill. On the outside of the envelope was written:

"Red—quick—two hours.

"Yellow about 5—can take two."

Note to Mother

In an adjoining dressing room was a note written on the actress' personal stationery and propped against a row of ornate cologne bottles.

It was addressed to "Dearest Mommie" and read:

"I'm sorry, really sorry, to put you through this. But there is no way to avoid it. I love you, darling, you have been the most wonderful mom ever and that applies to all our family.

"I love each and every one of them dearly. Everything goes to you. Look in the files and there is a will which decrees everything.

"Good by, My Angel. Pray for me."

It was signed, "Your Baby."

A statement by Officer Herbert Brittingham said she "apparently had taken her own life with an overdose of sleeping tablets."

The actress had been married four times and divorced three. Her

Text of Gen. Eisenhower's Statement on Political Stand

Following is the text of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's memorandum to Robert Harron, Columbia University press representative, declaring that he "could not accept nomination for any public office or participate in partisan political contests:

"I know that your office has for some days been overburdened with innumerable queries concerning my intentions in regard to the current political situation. My decisions and earnest convictions concerning possible personal connection with this year's political contest were given to the public several months ago but it now appears there has arisen a question as to whether or not I have changed my position. Profoundly touched by the renewed suggestion that I could satisfactorily fill high public office, my views with respect to my proper course of duty are still identical with those presented in the letter I wrote on January 23, 1948.

"In response to any further queries as to my course of action during the foreseeable future, and in order that there may be no possible room for doubt in the mind of any interested American will you please invite attention to the firm purpose expressed in my January letter and quote the following as coming personally from me.

" 'I shall continue, subject to the pleasure of the university trustees, to perform the important duties I have undertaken as president of Columbia. I will not, at this time, identify myself with any political party and could not accept nomination for any public office or participate in partisan political contests.

" 'This implies no intention of maintaining silence on any issue of importance to the country on which I may feel qualified to express an opinion.' "

Signed: DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

Below is the text of the letter which General Eisenhower wrote on January 23, 1948, which he said last night is identical with his present views. It was addressed to Leonard V. Finder, publisher of the Manchester (N. H.) Evening Leader, when Eisenhower was being suggested as a Republican candidate.

DEAR MR. FINDER:

Your letter and editorial have been on my desk for more than a week while I pondered the reply merited by your obvious concern for the Nation's welfare and, from a personal standpoint, by the honor you had done me. Months ago I thought that unqualified denial of political ambition would eliminate me from consideration in the coming campaign for the Presidency, because that office has, since the days of Washington, historically and properly fallen only to aspirants.

That some few would misinterpret or look for hidden meanings in my past expressions was expected and discounted, but my failure to convince thoughtful and earnest men, such as yourself, proves that I must make some amplification. This will necessarily partake of the laborious, due to the complexity of the factors that have influenced me to say no more than I have, but which dictate my decision that I am not available for and could not accept nomination to high political office.

I have heretofore refrained from making the bald statement that I would not accept nomination, although this has been my intention since the subject was first mentioned to me.

This omission seems to have been a mistake, since it has inadvertently misled sincere and disinterested Americans. But my reticence stemmed from cogent reasons. The first was that such an expression would smack of effrontery. I had and I have no desire to appear either as assuming that significant numbers of our peoples would actively interest themselves in me as a possible candidate, or to appear as lacking in respect and regard for the highest honor American citizens can confer upon one of their own body.

A second and even deeper reason was a persistent doubt that I could phrase a flat refusal without appearing to violate that concept of duty to country which calls upon every good citizen to place no limitations upon his readiness to serve in any designated capacity. On this point it is my conviction, that, unless an individual feels some inner compulsion and special qualifications to enter the political arena which I do not, a refusal to do so involves no violation of the highest standards of devotion to duty.

It was only the possible misinterpretation of my attitude that caused me concern and so long as I could believe that mere denial of political ambition would prevent serious misunderstanding and misdirected effort, I was reluctant to say more. It would seem almost superfluous for me to add that as long as I live I shall hold myself in instant readiness to respond to any call by the Government to military duty.

In full awareness, then, and not in violation of my own sense of duty, I have developed the following conclusions, which are responsible for my negative decision.

It is my conviction that the necessary and wise subordination of the military to civil power will be best sustained, and our people will have greater confidence that it is so sustained when lifelong professional soldiers in the absence of some obvious and over-riding reasons, abstain from seeking high political office. This truth has a possible inverse application. I would regard it as unalloyed tragedy for our country if ever should come the day when military commanders might be selected with an eye to their future potentialities in the political field rather than exclusively upon judgment as to their military abilities.

Politics is a profession; a serious, complicated and, in its true sense, a noble one.

In the American scene I see no dearth of men fitted by training, talent and integrity for National leadership. On the other hand, nothing in the international or domestic situation especially qualifies for the most important office in the world a man whose adult years have been spent in the country's military forces. At least this is true in my case.

I am deeply regretful if a too simple faith in the effectiveness of a plain denial has misled any considerable number concerning my intentions and so allowed them to spend time and effort under erroneous impressions. At the risk of appearing pompous, I must say that the honor paid me cannot fail to spur me, in future years, to work the more diligently for America, her youth, her veterans, and all her citizens, and for the continuance of peace.

I trust that this rather lengthy explanation will convince you

Blazing Sun in Missouri

Heat Fells 40 As President Dedicates Statue of Bolivar

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Bolivar, Mo., July 5.—A blazing sun struck down 40 persons in a crowd of 13,000 that turned out to see President Truman and President Romulo Gallegos of Venezuela today.

Gov. Phil Donnelly of Missouri was one of the heat victims. He is scheduled to nominate Mr. Truman at the Democratic Convention.

The occasion was the dedication of a $100,000 bronze statue of Bolivar, South American liberator.

In accepting the statue, President Truman told the crowd that the cooperation among the American republics was an example of what could be done "in establishing the same kind of cooperation with other countries in the United Nations."

He said the world must expect more delays and disappointments in its quest for peace but voiced confidence that "we can succeed." He pointed out that Bolivar called the first Pan-American conference

Ike Issues Statement Reiterating Earlier Stand

Supporters Differ On Future Action; Anti-Truman Move Dead, Sparkman Says

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower called off the swelling "We Want Ike" Democratic Presidential boom last night with a statement that he "could not accept nomination for any public office."

Politicians in Washington said his language was apparently as strong as he could have made it short of repeating General Sherman's famous statement that he would not run if nominated nor serve if elected.

But with at least 110 nominating votes definitely committed to him and scores of others wavering in his direction, there was no immediate assurance that the boom was wholly broken up.

No Party Identification

In a memorandum made public through Columbia University where he is president, the retired Army Chief of Staff said he "will not at this time, identify myself with any political party and could not accept nomination for any political office or participate in partisan political contests."

He said his views were still the same as last January, when he headed off a Republican nomination move with a statement that he was "not available for and could not accept nomination to high political office."

One big question left by the Eisenhower statement was what happens now at a caucus called in Philadelphia next Saturday, just ahead of the Democratic National Convention. The sponsors of that meeting, including James Roosevelt, California State chairman, have been strong Eisenhower men although their call did not name any individual.

The Eisenhower boom obviously had come to the stage where only a flat "no" from the general would head it off short of a vote at Philadelphia.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the late President and one of the chief draft-Eisenhower sponsors, had gone on the radio only a few hours before the general's statement to say that he believed Eisenhower would respond to "a really sincere draft."

[In Washington, Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.), a leader in the draft-Eisenhower movement, said last night he believed the "definite and final" stand of the general against a political draft has crushed the "dump-Truman" drive in the Democratic Party.]

Leon Henderson, chairman of Americans for Democratic Action which has backed Eisenhower, also took the general's word as final. He said it amounted to rejecting the nomination.

But Henderson said Eisenhower's move "does not alter the fact that President Truman has been repudiated by the Democratic Party."

Backers Still Hopeful

In Philadelphia, the national Eisenhower-for-President headquarters said last night it still has faith that General Eisenhower "will bow to the will of the people."

'Ike' Caucus Still On, Roosevelt Declares

Los Angeles, July 5 (U.P.).—James Roosevelt, a leader in the "draft Eisenhower" movement, said tonight that the general's statment "clearly indicates that he will not serve as a partisan President but will answer a call to national duty."

"I am tonight, therefore, reissuing the call for the caucus to be held in Philadelphia this coming Saturday night," Roosevelt said.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

First Woman Member of FCC Makes Impression on Senators With Frankness

One of Miss Frieda Hennock's chief characteristics is frankness.

The brown-eyed blonde, who will be sworn in at noon today as the Federal Communications Commission's first woman member, showed that when she appeared before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate for her preconfirmation grilling.

FRIEDA B. HENNOCK
Her motto is frankness

"I'm against you and I always have been," she told the predominantly Republican group. "I have done my best to collect money for Roosevelt and have probably taken a lot of good Republican money away from what you wanted to collect."

Trying to get the hearing down to matters a little closer to the FCC, a Republican Senator asked her:

"Do you know anything about radio?"

"Only that I've raised a lot of money for radio programs for Roosevelt," the pert lady shot back.

Surprisingly enough, after such a self-introduction to the august Senators, Miss Hennock's appointment by President Truman was confirmed—and the confirmation was jammed through as the Senate's last act just before the members adjourned early on Sunday morning, June 20.

Women's Rights Champion

A champion of women's rights, she succeeds Commissioner Clifford J. Durr on the FCC, which has been an all-male outfit during its 25-year history. Indications are that she may be as independent-minded among the six other members as Durr, who resigned at the expiration of his term on June 30.

A New Deal Democrat who supported Roosevelt and worked hard on behalf of Mayor O'Dwyer's election as Mayor of New York, Miss Hennock is a member of the otherwise 100 per cent Republican law firm of Choate, Mitchell and Ely. The 141-year-old firm has offices on Broad st., New York.

"But they don't discriminate against women or Democrats," she said recently.

The firm will lose one of its best trial and corporation lawyers—and a valuable pleader before most any male jury. A trim, smartly dressed woman, she admits to being "over 40"—spies say 43—but declares, "I don't look as old as I am, thank goodness." Her associates agree she looks thirtyish, and she usually sports a handsome tan from playing golf.

She has tried most every type of law case—except one before the FCC. While her knowledge of radio is limited to listening to it and promoting some financing for Roosevelt broadcasts, she will feel at home on the FCC, whose members are traditionally either lawyers or engineers.

Leaves Lucrative Practice

Miss Hennock will have to give up her lucrative law practice for the $10,000 a year job.

"That doesn't concern me," she says. "It will cost me plenty, but I will be glad to have a chance to serve."

A graduate of Brooklyn Law School in 1926, she put up her shingle the day after with a net capital of $56. She trained in the days when the big universities either refused to give law degrees to women or discouraged them as much as possible from trying for them.

She won seven acquittals in murder cases in the first few years of her practice, and has fought cases against some of the top criminal lawyers. After practicing independently for 15 years, she joined the Choate, Mitchell and Ely firm in 1941. Lately, she has specialized in civil law.

Miss Hennock goes all out in her belief that there is a good field for members of her sex in the legal profession. Women "debunk" the law, she declares, they are "not stuffy," and they realize that they usually have to compete with large, male law firms and have to produce results.

Born in Poland

One of her clients while she was practicing on her own was Mrs. Alicia Dupont Glendenning, who had had a suit over custody of her son for 13 years. After other attorneys had failed, Miss Hennock won the custody case.

The new FCC commissioner was born in Kobel, Poland, the youngest of eight children. Her father brought her to American when she was 6, along with five sisters and two brothers. Both her parents are dead, but Miss Hennock lives in the family's Park ave. penthouse home, which they moved into 18 years ago.

Her rooftop garden has given her an opportunity to raise trees and flowers. She plays the piano and the violin, likes to dance, and is a good cook.

Souther Avers Machine Rule Stifles Free Va. Government

Arthur F. Souther, Arlington businessman and Democratic candidate for Congress from Virginia's Eighth District, last night charged "machine politics" with "smothering" representative government in Virginia.

Speaking on Radio Station WARL, Souther pointed to both State and county Democratic conventions as backing his contention that "there is no such thing as representative government in Virginia today."

Of the State Democratic convention in Richmond July 2, where delegates sought for a record vote on a group of resolutions voted on all together, Souther said, "On every side one heard the remark, 'What is the use of coming all the way to Richmond to have this kind of stuff rammed down our throats.'"

"Many of the delegations including that from Arlington," Souther continued, "were handpicked by the party bosses because they could be depended upon to rubber-stamp the actions of the machine."

Souther indorsed nonpartisan election of county board members as "the only way that the large segment of Federal workers can be given a voice."

Dewey Relaxes, Says Nothing About Eisenhower

Pawling, N. Y., July 5 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today was conducting a "front porch campaign" to keep cool, relaxing with his family in 85-degree heat on the veranda of their farm home.

The Republican presidential nominee had declared a "moratorium on politics" over the holiday weekend and neither he nor any member of his party had anything to say about the last-hour drive to nominate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as his Democratic opponent.

It was learned, however, that a source close to Eisenhower had told Dewey before the Republican Convention that four GOP aspirants would be "satisfactory" to the general—Dewey, Gov. Earl Warren, Harold Stassen and Senator Arthur Vandenberg.

Bolivar Statue Dedicated more than a century ago and praised the "great vision of the Liberator in this invitation to understanding."

Both President Truman and President Gallegos appeared to be in misery as they sat on a flag-draped stand, just below the John E. Smith chicken hatchery.

Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, White House physician, set up a clinic for heat victims in the Southwest Baptist College, where a picnic luncheon was served following the dedication ceremonies.

Thermometers From 102 to 110

Nobody seemed to know exactly how hot it was. The townsfolk said they had no official weather bureau, but their thermometers registered all the way from 102 to 110.

Dr. John M. C. Crane, who promoted the dedication ceremony, told the sweating throng that he hoped and prayed that "this will be the first of a series of programs to bring the 21 American Republics together."

Dr. Crane was introduced as the man who "conceived the whole idea" of the Bolivar ceremony. He has written 24 books or booklets about the national heroes of the Western Hemisphere, including Simon Bolivar, San Martin, Bernardo O'Higgins, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln.

The terrific heat was the topic of the day. Once the oratory was over at the dedication ceremony, President Gallegos had but one desire—to take a bath. He had been wiping his forehead with a handkerchief for an hour or more.

President Truman did a lot of forehead mopping, too, but he was in his native Missouri, and smiled through it all.

Governor Donnelly was so ill as a result of a heat stroke that he was under a physician's care for several hours.

The presidential special train left Bolivar at 4:30 p. m. (EST) en route for Willard, Mo., a 50-minute ride. There the Venezuelan party left the train to drive to Springfield, Mo., airport for a flight to New York.

In his speech here, Mr. Truman paid tribute to Simon Bolivar as a champion of "human liberty and understanding among nations." He said all the 21 American republics "stand on equal terms" and then interpolated:

"There's not a single American republic afraid of an invasion from its great American neighbor to the north."

The visiting chief executives, accompanied by their wives, and diplomats from many South American countries, took their chairs in the sun long before noon. The parade they had witnessed earlier lasted about an hour.

As President Gallegos, speaking in Spanish, began his address a few raindrops fell over the perspiring crowd, but they were of short-lived duration. The sun blazed out as though nothing had happened.

President Gallegos said he entrusted the statue to the people "as though I were giving you a seed of love for Venezuela, to be planted in your soil." He said he did so "in the hope that the flower that eventually blooms upon the plant grown from that seed will be love for that America which we all share."

There were other speakers, Governor Donnelly, Mayor Doyle C. McCraw, and members of the Simon Bolivar Memorial Foundation.

Crane enlisted Mr. Truman's support of a memorial to Bolivar in this little town when the latter was a Senator. Mr. Truman wrote Franklin D. Roosevelt and received his commendation for the idea as far back as January 6, 1942, a letter made public here disclosed.

Truman Steers Clear Of Politics in Speech

Aboard Truman train en route to Washington, July 5 (AP).—President Truman skirted clear of political talk tonight as he headed back to the White House from the dedication at Bolivar, Mo., of a statue to a South American hero.

The President gave no outward sign either at Bolivar or in a subsequent platform appearance at Springfield of the concern among some of his staff over the "stop Truman" movement within his own party.

He appeared cheerful and unworried as he spoke briefly to a crowd gathered around the rear of his private car at Springfield. He stuck to the theme he followed at Bolivar, that hemispheric solidarity is furnishing an example to all the world how nations may live in peace and friendship.

However, presidential aides did not hide their surprise over the announcement that Democratic leader Frank J. Hague of New Jersey had joined the draft-Eisenhower ranks. They had counted him as a certain Truman supporter at the convention.

The President asserted that peace is easier, cheaper and more beneficial to the world than "the approach from a shooting angle."

"I never want to see another war," he said.

He spoke from the rear platform of his private car to a crowd estimated at upward of 2000 persons.

Old friends swarmed aboard the car for a handshake with the Chief Executive. He got a gift from Stephen Stoeltz, 6-year-old stepson of Dr. George I. Mills, jr., Springfield dentist—an especially made German automatic pistol with "Harry" on one side and "Truman" on the other.

"Is that for the Democratic National Convention?" a reporter asked.

"Oh no, not necessarily," Mr. Truman replied quickly. "I might use it in the campaign," he smiled broadly.

'I Could Not Accept,' Says Eisenhower in Statement

GEN. EISENHOWER
"Could not accept"

ters in downtown Philadelphia, site of the Democratic Convention, said "we are not closing our headquarters."

The general's statement came after a day of Nation-wide developments bearing on the draft-Eisenhower movement.

One of the most important of these was action by former Senator Hugh B. Mitchell (D., Wash.), a member of the platform committee for the Democratci National Convention, who telegraphed Truman asking the President to take the leadership of the Eisenhower movement.

Supporting such action was another Democratic leader, Gov. Ben T. Laney of Arkansas, chairman of the States Rights Democratic Organization in the South.

Laney said in Little Rock that Truman—by stepping out of the picture for the Democratic presidential nomination—could make "a real contribution to the Nation and the world."

Meanwhile, more Democratic leaders were climbing aboard the Eisenhower bandwagon during the day yesterday.

Gov. Jim McCord of Tennessee was one of them. "I think his nomination would be the answer to all the problems of the South," the Governor said.

The Nashville Tennessean reported it had polled 27 of the State's 40 delegates to the Democratic National Convention and had found 21 of them for Eisenhower.

Stennis Offers Support

Another, Senator John C. Stennis of Mississippi, said in a speech at Vicksburg that he would be pleased to cast a vote for Eisenhower, and "I hope that he will accept the call to service of his country again."

Paul H. Douglas, Democratic candidate for the United States Senate from Illinois, urged Mr. Truman to withdraw. Speaking at Northwestern University, he said Eisenhower "is the man who, without lifting a finger to win the Presidency, and while discouraging all efforts in his behalf, nevertheless has been chosen by America for its new President. . . . The people do not want him to run to save a party. . . . The people want him to run to save the Nation and help save the world. . . . Unless prevented by sinister forces, the nomination can be his."

Douglas said that "Harry Truman has certainly done his best. . . . history may ultimately give him much the same kindly judgment as it has finally accorded sturdy Andrew Johnson who strove without Lincoln's genius, to carry out Lincoln's policies."

Democratic National Committeeman Harry Carlson of New Hampshire had said that a conference and later telephone conversation with Eisenhower had made him "satisfied" the former Chief of Staff is available for the Democratic nomination.

He admitted, however, that the general hadn't actually told him he would accept and that he didn't put the question directly because he didn't consider it appropriate.

Eisenhower campaign headquarters yesterday made a bid for support direct to Pennsylvania delegates.

Senator Francis J. Myers said, however, that the State delegation was unpledged but would go to the convention on record with an indorsement of Truman.

Robert W. Calvert, chairman of the Texas Democratic executive committee, proposed yesterday that his party nominate Eisenhower for President and former Postmaster General James A. Farley for Vice President.

Publisher Oliver Emmerich of McComb, Miss., director of the Southern States Rights campaign, said his group might go all out for Eisenhower "if he can commit himself to the States' rights principles."

In New York, Philip J. Scupler of Brooklyn, a State Assemblyman, said in a message to Democratic State Chairman Paul E. Fitzpatrick that New York Democrats think either General Eisenhower or Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas would make an "admirable" candidate. Schupler is a delegate to the convention.

Douglas said "No comment" yesterday when asked at Lostine, Oreg., whether he would be receptive to nomination offers.

He said that if the Eisenhower boom is part of a Douglas-for-President strategy, he does not know of it. A Truman aide had said that at least some of those booming Eisenhower are doing so as a cover for activities in behalf of Douglas.

The North Carolina Veterans for Eisenhower Committee got into the act yesterday. It sent General Eisenhower a telegram saying that "no citizen who advocates universal military training and drafting of the Nation's youth for military service can refuse an honest and honorable draft for public office in these perilous times."

Plans went ahead, meanwhile, for a caucus of 18 party leaders at Philadelphia Saturday, two days before the nominating convention is to open. This caucus, headed by James Roosevelt and actively supported by Mayor O'Dwyer of New York City, has the announced plan of finding the right man to nominate. It is no secret that Eisenhower is the man most of the 18 leaders want, although his name was not used in the caucus call.

Democratic Fight Recalls 1860 Split

By The Associated Press

The Democratic Party moved yesterday into what promises to be one of the most hectic periods of its history.

This week a new fight, the battle of the 1948 platform, starts at Philadelphia. A resolutions committee begins work on the document Wednesday, five days before the national convention opens.

At the center of the platform fight will be the question of civil rights. Angry disagreement over that problem is one of the reasons for the current fast-moving drive to draft Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the party's candidate for President.

1860 Schism Recalled

The preliminary uproar over the platform's civil rights plank has been so furious that students of American history can't help thinking of the battle of the 1860 platform. Then, as now, most of the fury came from the South.

The 1860 scrap was the Democrats' most disastrous one. The issue: Extension of slavery into new U. S. soil. Before it ended, the party had broken apart with a historic smash. This opened the way for the election of the first Republican President, Abraham Lincoln.

The 1860 convention met in Charleston, S. C. In that year the Nation was divided into several points of view on slavery.

Northern Abolitionists wanted to wipe it out wherever it existed.

Abraham Lincoln, an Illinois Republican, wanted only to keep slavery from spreading into new States and Territories.

Stephen A. Douglas, an Illinois Democrat, took another view: Leave it up to the people in each new Territory whether they got slavery or not.

But Southern Democrats demanded that slavery be permitted in all new areas. At Charleston, a majority of the resolutions committee brought forth a platform containing that view.

Instead, the convention went along with Douglas and adopted a platform which avoided any specific declaration on slavery. This caused the delegates from seven Southern States to walk out, and the convention adjourned in confusion.

The 1860 Democrats met again at Baltimore. Five more Southern States walked out. The delegations that remained nominated Douglas for President.

The delegations that bolted held their own convention at Richmond and nominated John C. Breckinridge of Kentucky.

This crack-up handed the brand-new Republican Party the election on a platter after 60 years of almost unbroken Democratic rule.

Today there is no slavery issue, but the civil rights fight resembles it in that it takes place in the emotional arena of race relations.

Visitors Pay Declaration Scant Heed

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

"Why it's faded, badly faded! You can hardly read it," gasped the heavy-set, perspiring woman.

"Yes, ma'am," answered the Library of Congress' guard patiently, "That's because it's 172 years old—but I assure you, it's still good."

She was one of the few persons who yesterday recognized the Declaration of Independence when they came upon it, in its bronze and marble shrine directly above the original copy of the United States Constitution in the main exhibition hall of the Library of Congress.

Receives Little Notice

As the nation yesterday formally marked its birthdate of independance, the histhoric document which proclaimed the citizens' birthright of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness was generally glanced at with only brief curiosity.

Above the two cases containing the documents is the inscription, "The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States," but most visitors failed to observe it.

"Why are there two copies of this paper?" asked a teen-ager, pointing to the cases. Quietly, not to embarrass her, the guard explained what the "papers" were. At least one person out of every five asked the same question.

"I try not to be sarcastic—these people mean well," said Guard John H. Decker, 39, of 418 A st. se., a Navy veteran who first came to the Library in 1938. "But you'd be surprised at some of the questions they ask," he added, thoughtfully.

A well-dressed, bespectacled man, pointing at the Declaration of Independence which Decker had identified for him, asked, "Where is Lincoln's signature?"

"Is it notarized?" asked a woman who had just discovered the flourish of John Hancock's signature on the Declaration. Decker shook his head, commenting with a sigh, "It's legal, though."

Not all visitors were like that. Two grammar-school girls hurried up, and came to an abrupt, respectful halt, and one said in a whisper, her eyes fixed on the Declaration of Independence, "This is it."

Why Not Typed?

A priest stopped by, and his lips formed the words, "When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands . . ."

"Why didn't they type it?" inquired a girl of about 9 who stopped beside him. "I guess they didn't have typewriters in those days," the priest answered with a smile. "They didn't have lots of things that we have now."

"Which one of these is the Declaration of Independence?" asked a woman who had just arrived. Decker turned with a here-we-go-again look, and said softly, "I'll bet you really know that. See the date on the top one—'July 4, 1776'?"

The Washington Monument and the skies overhead were flooded with a brilliant burst of fireworks last night as the city ended its weekend commemorative program.

Celebrated were the 172d anni- Declaration of Independence, and versary of the signing of the the centennial celebration of the laying of the cornerstone of the Monument to George Washington.

A splatter of rain which dwindled into a light drizzle just before the fireworks brought the only setback to the program which drew about 200,000 spectators.

The spectacular fireworks display was preceded by a simple but equally impressive event, the match-lighting ceremony led by movie actor Edward Arnold. No longer a novelty for Monument Grounds' night celebration, it still drew a deep, almost gasping chorus of approval.

Last evening program, climax to three days of special eventing to honor the country and its "Father," began slowly, to recorded music at the Monument Grounds. By 7:50 p. m., with the bulk of the crowd still to arrive, the transcribed music gave way to a band concert by the Marine Corps and Navy bands.

Innate patriotism was roused among the witnesses in the 10-minute rites of massing of the colors and the flag-raising ceremony that followed.

Next was the invocation by the Right Rev. John Keating Cartwright, rector of St. Matthew's Cathedral, and an address of welcome by Leon Chatelain, jr., chairman of the event and president of the Washington Board of Trade.

Then came the stage entertainment, a variety show by the Shyrettos, Franklin and Moore, and Baritone Gene Archer, interspersed by a history of the American flag by Guy A. Caponnetto, exalted ruler of Washington Lodge No. 15, BPO Elks; retirement of the colors to the music of both bands, and a reading by Arnold of excerpts from the Declaration of Independence.

Principal speaker was Chief Justice Bolitha Laws, of the District Courts, while Mrs. Esther Rosenbloom, native of French Morocco, gave her personal account of the blessing of United States citizenship. Justice Laws led the congregation in the Oath of Allegiance.

Shortly after 9:30, with the colors down and the area in blackout punctuated by "sparklers" set off by the spectators, the night display of fireworks began.

In an hour, the celebration was over, an occasion to be remembered and talked about whenever the Monument or July Fourth fireworks are mentioned.

Awards for the best displays in Saturday's parade were presented at a ceremony before the fireworks display.

The United States Marine Corps was presented, with a silver bowl for the best float in the line of march.

The prize was accepted in behalf of the corps, by Col Leonard B. Cresswell, commanding officer of the Marine barracks here.

Certificates of merit were awarded to the Washington Gaslight Co., Call Carl, Inc., The Washington Graphic Arts Association and the On Leong Chinese Merchants Association.

A light sprinkle of rain started shortly before 9 p. m. but an announcement over the public address system that the weather bureau predicted it would be of short duration calmed some few who had started to leave.

time to get back for its fireworks, at 9:30 p. m. For the stay-at-homes, the day was for picnicking and neighborhood celebrations.

About 6000 persons, including 600 paraders, participated in holiday celebration at Takoma Park, Md. The town parade was followed by patriotic exercises, a field day of games and sports, afterdark fireworks and public dancing on the cement tennis courts at 3d and Van Buren sts. nw.

Another 500, mostly residents of the Potomac Heights section of Northwest Washington, picnicked and participated in a community program of festival, baby show and dancing at Palisades Field House, Edmonds and Sherrier places, nw.

An estimated 3000 individuals turned out for the Eastgate neighborhood celebration at Taft and Langdon Parks to see Burke Wilson, 15, of 1931 Hamlin st. ne., best 30 opponents in a coaster race down South Dakota ave. Wilson ran the 1000-foot course in 22 seconds flat.

The crowd also saw Little Mary Weber, of 3638 18th st. ne., eat her way through about one-sixth of a watermelon in 2 minutes 50 seconds, to win first prize in that event. Tennis, softball and other sports events kept spectators and contestants amused.

There were 500 persons out for the holiday doings of the Metropolis View Citizens Association and the District Recreation Department at Edgewood Playground, Third and Evarts sts. ne. Featured event, the rolling pin throw for married women, was won by Mrs. Frank Stambaugh, of 2608 Third st. ne. She admitted to being married for 12 years.

Night fireworks at the Rock Creek Recreation Center attracted 5000 spectators of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase (Md.) sector. The display was sponsored by the communities' service council.

Youth, 18, Killed In Constructing Big Firecracker

Ambler, Pa., July 5 (AP).—An 18-year-old youth was killed today in the explosion of a giant firecracker he was attempting to build, Coroner W. J. Rushong of Montgomery County reported.

The coroner said that Edward Foulkes, jr., son of a prominent attorney, was with three other boys at an estate in nearby Blue Bell when the mishap occurred.

Rushong gave this version:

The four youths had purchased some chemicals and dragged a piece of heavy pipe onto a lawn. There they inserted the chemicals and Foulkes was stuffing rags into the pipe when the mixture exploded.

He was dragged into a house, but was pronounced dead upon the arrival of a physician. The other youths escaped injury since they were out of range of the flying particles.

No Trace Found Of Plane Lost On Mexican Peak

Mexico City, July 5 (U.P.).—A foot and mouth disease commission plane carrying 15 men slammed into the eastern slope of Orizaba Peak Friday and their fate was still unknown today. Two ground parties were climbing the rugged slopes of the mountain today.

The United States Foot and Mouth Disease Commission, which had chartered the plane, announced $40,000 in commission funds was in the custody of O. C. Morris of Washington, D. C., head of the budget and fiscal department of the commission.

Diplomatic Moves In Cold War Studied

By James M. Minifie
New York Herald Tribune News Service

Two diplomatic moves of the first importance in the cold war between the USSR and the western powers are in preparation here today.

One of them will get under way when the heads of missions of the Western Union powers meet—probably today—with Robert A. Lovett, Undersecretary of State, at the State Department, to discuss the next step in the implementation of the Vandenberg resolution. This authorized the "association" of the United States with regional defense pacts under the United Nations which affect the security of the United States.

The other is a tough note to the USSR by the United States, Britain and France, protesting the Russian blockade of the western allies' sector of Berlin. State Department sources last night said it was still under consideration here. In view of the rejection of the western allies' on-the-spot protests by the Russian commander, Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, it is a safe assumption that the note will be sent very shortly.

The Western Union meeting here will follow prolonged meetings in London of the consultative council and the permanent military committee set up after the Brussels agreement of March 17. At that time the foreign ministers of Britain, France, Belgium, The Netherlands, and Luxembourg signed a 50-year alliance for mutual self-defense and for collaboration in economic, social and cultural matters.

The State Department's view that the western European powers would have to organize themselves before they could expect definite United States' military support was made clear to Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgian premier here shortly after the Brussels meeting.

The permanent military committee in London presumably has sought to determine what the western powers need to do to implement the 50-year alliance. From this could be determined the residual needs which might be filled by the United States.

The next step would be a fairly definite plan for U. S. participation. This would not necessarily mean joining the alliance. "Association" was the word used in the Vandenberg resolution. This would almost certainly take into account U. S. lend-lease materials and equipment for defense. The proposals ultimately worked out are scheduled to come up before the next Congress.

Another facet is the possibility of bringing the Scandinavian powers into the Western European set-up. So far no confirmation has been available of reports this is being steadily worked on by the State Department. But the reports continue.

The note prepared for dispatch to Moscow is described in diplomatic quarters as "tough," but not an ultimatum—which the Allies would not have the military strength to back up.

Delaware Indian Skeletons Being Set Up at Smithsonian

The Washington Post

Sheila Spencer, secretary in division of Anthropology, National Museum, inspects skull of middle-aged male. Front left is skull of young male and on right, with mouth open, is female

Skeletal remains of Delaware Indians who presumably died before the Iroquois who were there when the palefaces took over their domain are being delicately pieced together at the Smithsonian Institution.

The fragmentary skeletons, dating somewhere between the years 1000 and 1492, were plowed up by farmers near Lewes, Del., some 10 miles north of that latter-day happy hunting ground, Rehoboth Beach.

This collection, donated by the Sussex County Archeological Association, may add to scientists' slight information about the last of the Delaware Indians. As Dr. Marshall Newman, associate curator of physical anthropology explains the problem: "We wiped 'em out before we could study them."

The bones were found in distorted positions in prehistoric oyster and clam shell pits. This indicates, among other things, that the Algonquin Indians who inhabited the Atlantic coast, enjoyed oyster and clam bakes long before the whitefaces moved in.

Bones are distorted, probably because Indians had only primitive instruments for digging. They apparently found it easier to make the bodies of colleagues who bit the dust fit the grave, rather than vice versa, Dr. Newman suggests.

The fact that no trade goods, such as wampum, beads or white man's rum bottles, were unearthed seems to establish that the skeletons predate Columbus and early Dutch settlers, Dr. Newman reports.

Success of Yugoslav Loan Cited as Support for Tito

Belgrade, July 5 (AP).—New evidence of public support for Marshal Tito—under strong criticism by the Cominform—was seen tonight in an announcement that 50 million dollars of the 70-million-dollar national loan has been collected.

Borba, the Yugoslav Communist newspaper, said this amount was subscribed in the first five days of the new loan.

(Well-informed sources in Bucharest, Romania, said they believed the Cominform—the nine-nation Communist International Information Bureau—met there this weekend, possibly to discuss its controversy with Tito.

(Foreign correspondents there were unable to verify the report and the Romanian, 3000-word resolution denouncing Tito's leadership of Yugoslavia was adopted at a meeting.

Yugoslav newspapers were filled with reports of renewed allegiance to Tito. Despite this, an air of contradiction continued to dominate the press.

On the front pages appeared reports of slashing replies to the Cominform charges by Yugoslav Communist leaders. On the back pages appeared news items of normal operations between the Cominform countries.

Only last night a high Yugoslav Communist said Yugoslavia does not feel isolated because "we know the USSR will not and cannot abandon Yugoslavia in its relations with the imeprialists."

Milovan Djilas, a member of the Yugoslav Communist Party's central committee, replied to charges against Tito's government by various member nations of the Cominform.

Writing in Borba, Djilas said he based his statement on the Russians' anti-imperialistic policy. Yugoslavia relies on that policy, he declared, as a "realistic factor in today's relations."

Newspapers reported today that local committees of the Communist Party all over the country are sending messages to Belgrade that they are "with the marshal."

The Bulgarian cultural delegation, which arrived here last week, asked at first that no dinner be given in its honor, Borba said. However, the Yugoslavs solved the problem by telling them there would be no toasts at the dinner. This eliminated the need to toast Tito or anyone else.

All-Winter Blockade Predicted

determined to make available funds and resources for this purpose."

Vorwaerts implied that the Allies would not be willing to bear the expense.

Lesser Leaders Meet

Matern and other top officials of the Communist-dominated bloc, took up the same theme in speeches during the day at the meeting of 1200 lesser leaders.

Matern said control over production in all of Berlin must be taken over by the Socialist Party and joined to the party's two-year economic plan for the Soviet zone.

"The supply of Berlin via the air lift is disastrous idiocy, which is a slap in the face to the economic knowledge that Berlin belongs to the eastern zone," he said.

Of great importance to Berlin was the disclosure tonight that western Allied experts have decided that the air lift can bring in minimum coal needs, as well as food. The aerial freight operation will be stepped up to its peak late this week, and on Wednesday the first 100 coal-laden planes will land in the city, it was said.

Flying Boat Arrives

A spectacular addition to the operation was made today as the first British Sunderland flying boat set down in the waters of Berlin's main lake, the Wannsee. Henceforth, 10 of these giant craft will shuttle twice daily between Hamburg and Berlin.

The supply fleet has now grown to the point where an entire month's food supply can be brought in in 15 days. Thus, on July 15 the Anglo-American air fleet will be able to give its space to coal, medicines and industrial goods.

Already food stockpiles have been built up so that there are reserves of sugar for four months, fats and potatoes for 62 days and milk and cereals for 38 days, officials said.

Allied observers found the Nacht Express hint that the blockade was the Soviet way of seeking four-power talks at complete variance with the official Russian explanation of the blocade—"technical repairs to the rail line."

U. S. Inquiry Under Way

Nevertheless, American officials disclosed they had started their own private inquiry to find out just what repairs, if any, the Russians had undertaken on the railway.

Anti-Jewish Riots Feared in Germany

Montreux, Switzerland, July 5 (AP).—A world Jewish leader warned tonight that anti-Semitic rioting may break out soon in Germany.

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the organization's executive, told the closing session of the World Jewish Congress that attacks by western zone Germans against Jewish displaced persons were expected at any moment. He urged that allied occupation authorities take "firm precautionary measures."

An unidentified delegate—a displaced person—spoke up from the audience. He told of allegedly systematic rumors and a press campaign accusing Jewish displaced persons of profiteering with the new currency in Germany's western zones and benefiting from the monetary reform, while German people suffered.

Earlier, a plenary session of the congress approved unanimously a resolution defining the principles of the congress' policies. The resolution previously had caused a 25-hour deadlock in the congress political committee between Communist and anti-Communist delegations.

The dispute was centered mainly on the use of doubtful political expressions such as "progressive" and "truly democratic."

The resolution declared:

1. That the Jewish people desire to "live in equality and dignity in a world of peace, democracy and international cooperation."

2. That the independence and security of the state of Israel and the elimination of fascism are primary conditions of Jewish survival.

3. That the development of mankind can be achieved only in a united world and that the Jewish people view with grave concern developments dividing the world into conflicting and antagonistic spheres of interest."

4. That the Jewish people are resolved to cooperate with all democratic groups "for the advancement of democracy and for the right of all human beings to security, peace and liberty."

5. That it is the responsibility of all governments to eliminate anti-Semitism and other forms of racial discrimination.

6. That the common purpose of the congress delegates is "to secure and sustain the rights and status of the Jewish people everywhere of all Jewish activity to this end is imperative.

Cripps Urges Acceptance Of U. S. Aid

London, July 5 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer, urged the Commons today to accept Marshall Plan aid.

Cripps

He declared the terms of the recovery program were reasonable and prudent and asked for unanimous approval.

Such approval would assure Britain of 300 million dollars as a grant and 100 million dollars as a loan in the next three months, with more to follow.

Without such help, Cripps said, "we could not hope to maintain either our present standard of living or our present level of production."

Cripps asked the MP's to "put yourselves in the place of members of Congress or of the ordinary United States citizen" in giving away "vast quantities of goods."

"Whatever view we may take as to whether this will, in the long run, be of help to them, or how necessary it is for their own economy at the present time, we must recognize that it is an action of great immediate generosity and enlightenment to offer to undertake such a program, and they are fully entitled as we should feel ourselves in like circumstances to take steps to insure that their aid achieves the aim it is designed to accomplish," he declared.

He said the net drain of British gold reserves this year already has reached 232 million pounds (928 million dollars), leaving only 473 million pounds ($1,892,000,000). Unless the drain is stopped by taking part in the Marshall Plan the British will be unable to support the pound abroad, Cripps said.

That would mean Britain could no longer function as the cornerstone of the sterling trade bloc, "the only large multilateral trading group in the world," he asserted.

One part of the agreement requires Britain to make every effort to stabilize its currency, maintain a valid exchange rate and balance its budget.

"These are all objectives that this government has emphasized over and over again," Cripps continued.

Another section guarantees the United States a fair share of vital materials from British Empire sources for stock-piling. Cripps described that as "a small return for all the help they are giving us."

Under the agreement, Britain would place in a special account the equivalent in pounds of the cost of direct aid received.

Cripps said both governments agreed that the best use for most of this special fund would be for retirement of the British public debt.

Cripps recommended the agreement as "a fair and sensible document in no way interfering with our rights to regulate our own affairs."

Two lines of opposition developed from the Tory side, Oliver Lyttleton questioned ERP effects on Britain's ecopomic relations with the empire.

John Platts-Mills, recently expelled from the Labor Party for being too far to the left, moved rejection of the agreement because it would put Britain on "a colonial status on a level with the most humble of the 16 nations."

U. S. Gives Pakistan Credit of 10 Millions

Karachi, Pakistan, July 5 (AP).—The Pakistan government has received a credit of 10 million dollars from the United States for the purchase of surplus United States supplies, it was announced officially today.

Supplies sought include medical stores, farm machinery, industrial plants and equipment for relief work.

Tameezuddin Ahmad, deputy president of the Pakistan Constituent Assembly, said today, "Well-trained, fully equipped Pakistani crusaders will soon be sent to the Palestine front to fight the Zionist aggressors."

He appealed for large sums of money, saying, "Our volunteers must be provided with adequate arms and all other essential equipment."

Togliatti Trieste Plan Reported

Rome, July 5 (AP).—A so-called "Togliatti plan" to ask Russia and the Cominform to return Trieste to Italy was reported today by the Rightist Giornale Della Sera.

The Rome newspaper headlined the Milan Dispatch: "New Communist bluff for the return of Trieste."

A report of the alleged plan drafted by Italy's Communist chief Palmiro Togliatti also was published in Milan's independent Corriere Lombardo.

The plan reportedly calls for fusion of the Communist Party of Venezia Giulia with the Italian Communist party; a request for "intervention by Moscow in which the Kremlin would accept the proposal of Bidault, Marshall and Bevin to return Triest to Italy, the same day that the last Anglo-American forces leave."

A leading Communist Party member, asked about the reported plan, said "I never heard anything of it and I don't think we will."

Slav Munitions Dump Blown Up Near Isola

Trieste, July 5 (U.P.).—A Yugoslav army munitions dump near Isola in the Yugoslav area of Trieste was blown up last night, eyewitness reports said today, in what apparently was an act of sabotage by pro-Cominform agents against Marshal Tito.

In another incident of possible sabotage, stacks of wheat were set afire in fields.

Fishing Boat Upsets, 7 Drown in Lousiana

Baton Rouge, La., July 5 (AP).—Seven or more persons drowned today when a fishing boat overturned in a canal near Ramah, La., the Baton Rouge fire department reported.

Seven bodies had been recovered, the report said, adding it was not certain that all had been found. Earlier, Joseph Scardino, store owner, had reported that 10 persons drowned.

Rioting Students Killed in Peiping

By Communists

British Fear Uprising In Malaya

Kuala Lumpur, Malaya, July 5 (AP).—Maj. Gen. C. H. Boucher indicated today the British expect major terrorist outbreaks in Malaya, July 7.

The army commander in chief of the federation told the legislative council:

"The seventh day of the seventh month is a big day for communism. I mention this here because I want it to have wide circulation." (Chinese Communists date their struggle with Chinese Nationalists as beginning July 7, 1938.)

He said measures are being taken to combat terrorism, which the British say is inspired by the Communists.

Boucher said the Royal navy is patrolling the coasts of Malaya to prevent more terrorists arriving. RAF planes are working with the ships a system of registration and identity cards will be put in use throughout Malaya.

End of Embargo Urged

Tel Aviv, Israel, July 5.—Representative Leo Isacson (Alp, N. Y.), said he had cabled President Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and Henry Wallace asking them to promise that if elected in November they would lift the embargo on arms to Palestine and give full recognition to Israel.

Peiping, China, July 5 (U.P.).—This North China university city was placed under martial law tonight after government police and troops fired into a crowd of 3000 rioting Manchurian student refugees, killing five and wounding 12.

Tonight's rioting was a continuation of riots earlier today in which 5000 university students wrecked the Peiping city council's office. Central News Agency said 20 soldiers or police "were killed or wounded" but it did not say which and listed no names.

The outbreak came when the city council proposed that refugee students be sent to summer camps for military training.

Five persons were listed as slain and a score were seriously injured.

Chinese students invariably react violently to suggestions that they be put in the army, regarding themselves as a special class.

They uprooted the iron gates of the city hall, beat four officials, including Police Superintendent Kao Wen, and smashed windows and furnishings in the council chamber. The mob then plastered the building with placards urging "Kill Every Council Member."

Police and steel-helmeted gendarmes broke the disorder by firing over the students' heads after a lively exchange of thrown stones.

Arabs Vote For War

Rhodes by plane for Tel Aviv. After conferences with Israel leaders he will travel to Cairo to talk with Arab League representatives. He will go back to Tel Aviv, for more talks with the Jews, then return to Rhodes.

The general atmosphere for his renewed efforts was not encouraging. Baghdad newspapers carried editorials today saying continued negotiations were a waste of time. The Jews hoped for peace but prepared for war. They raised the draft age for the army from 35 to 41 and tried out new searchlights purchased for the defense of Tel Aviv.

Jews Arriving in Haifa

Under the eyes of United Nations observers 2000 Jews arrived in Haifa from Cyprus. Another 2000 were on their way—the vanguard of 20,000 that Israeli officials hope to get into Israel as soon as feasible. The Jews were taken to Cyprus after attempts to smash the British blockade of Palestine during the days of mandate rule.

Bernadotte said at Rhodes that he proposed the demilitarization of the Holy City of Jerusalem, and of the port, terminal and refinery facilities in Jewish-controlled Haifa.

Bernadotte said United Nations guards would be used for policing the Jerusalem and Haifa areas. They would be enlisted from the U. N. Truce Commission members—the United States, France and Belgium. He said a majority favored in principle the sending of guards.

He estimated that 1000 guards would be needed for Jerusalem alone.

"You will recall I obtained agreement for demilitarization of Mount Scopus and the German hospice areas of Jerusalem," he said.

"Now I've made formal proposals that whatever is to happen, if war should start, for Jerusalem to be demilitarized.

"Similar arrangements are being proposed for the Haifa port terminals and oil refinery. You understand oil is quite important for the whole world."

One Killed, 54 Are Arrested As Motorcyclists Plague Town

Three motorcyclists, whose sweaters read "Boozefighters Motorcycle Club," stop for beer on one of Riverside, Calif., main streets as townspeople watch from relative safety

Riverside, Calif., July 5 (AP).—With one dead and 54 arrested in the second outbreak of rowdyism by motorcyclists in 11 months, Sheriff Carl F. Rayburn said today he will sponsor no more motorcycle races here.

He blamed "a bunch of crazy kids" for two nights of disorder marked by unscheduled street races, popping exhausts, fist fights and drinking.

"They made their brag they would bring motorcycle racing into disrepute," the sheriff said, attributing the disorders to "outlaw" motorcyclists barred from membership in the American Motorcycle Association.

Motorcycle races here last Labor Day, like today's 100-mile dirt track event sponsored by the Sheriff's Training Association, were attended by disorders which resulted in two deaths, 15 injuries and over a score of arrests.

He estimated that 2000 motorcyclists and some 3500 pedestrians swarmed the streets of this city last night and participated in a series of impromptu street races, accompanied by flying beer bottles, firecrackers and fists.

A riot call restored order after more than a dozen were arrested.

More than a score were jailed Saturday night when the disorders broke out, and as many more were arrested yesterday.

Clerical Equality For Women Asked Of Angelicans

LONDON, July 5 (AP).—The Lambeth Conference was asked today to give women equal status with men in the ministry of the Anglican Church.

The appeal was made by the Anglican group for the ordination of women to the ministry in a memorial proposing a "ministry of men and women merged into a common priesthood and a common diaconate."

"It seems to us irreverent to refuse to test a woman's claim to have received a call from the Holy Spirit of God, while accepting assurances to that effect from candidates who are male," the memorial declared.

What's different about DYNAFLOW DRIVE?

To an efficient new pump (left above), Buick engineers have added a true turbine (right) and an ingenious new supercharging assembly (in hand) which produce a torque-boosting action in starting and accelerating. The result is the first device on any American passenger car which employs liquid to fill the function of both the clutch and the usual low, second and high gears. The clutch pedal is eliminated and a simple control gives you manual selection of power ranges and direction.

France Price Cuts Rejected by Unions

During Strike

Italy's Oil Plants Put Under Guard

Rome, July 5 (AP).—Troops and police guarded Italy's petroleum plants today as a national strike of petroleum workers entered its sixth day.

There appeared little chance of a quick solution. The strikers demanded removal of police and troops from plants as one of the conditions to resume negotiations.

Agitation has been intermittent in the petroleum industry since workers and employers failed to agree in January, 1947 on terms of a new national contract. The workers' demands include higher wages to meet increased living costs and the decreased purchasing power of the lire.

A spokesman for the Petroleum Workers Federation—part of the Communist dominated Italian General Confederation of Labor—said all in the industry are striking but he declined to give the number.

Tomorrow the "calendar" of short strikes announced last week by the confederation will continue with a walkout by the nation's chemists. On Wednesday electricians strike, followed by steel workers Thursday. Glass, ceramics and saccharine workers will walk out Friday.

10 Killed, 2 Badly Hurt In Capraia Isle Blast

Leghorn, Italy, July 5 (U.P.).—Police reported 10 persons killed and two seriously injured today by an explosion which leveled three houses on the islet of Capraia, 20 miles southwest of Leghorn. The cause of the blast has not been determined.

In addition to the explosion two sharp earth shocks were felt early today in the Leghorn area. No casualties were reported and damage was slight.

Paris, July 5 (NYHT).—Non-Communist trade unions today rejected as "weak, timorous and insufficient" the French government's latest price - cutting effort to reduce inflationary living costs and maintain organized labor's support.

Schuman

A letter from a joint committee of the Workers Strength Movement, the Christian Workers Confederation and the Foremen's Confederation warned Premier Robert Schuman he would have to extend and intensify his operations if he wanted their backing.

The non-Communist unions have been fending off the demands of the Communist-led General Confederation of Labor for a 20 per cent wage increase since early in the spring.

Patience Exhausted

Showing their patience was exhausted, the tri-union letter called upon Schuman to undertake his responsibilities immediately because "the working class no longer will be duped."

Last week Schuman announced price reductions ranging from 3 to 15 per cent on household articles and agricultural equipment.

The non-Communists demanded absolute price-fixing for essentials in every stage of distribution, from the farmer to the consumer.

[The United Press said prices in France rose 2.3 per cent during June. It was announced officially that agricultural prices declined 2.4 per cent but those for industry rose 7.3 per cent.]

The Communist-dominated CGT has launched slow-down strikes in various strategic industries. In several French ports, ship departures—ships to bring Marshal Plan supplies for the recovery of France—are being delayed 24 hours.

Arias Takes Refuge In Canal Zone

Panama, Panama, July 5 (AP).—Arnulfo Arias Madrid, who apparently won the Presidency of Panama six weeks ago on the basis of complete but unofficial returns, appeared publicly today in the Canal Zone where he has taken refuge.

Panama was under a state of emergency because of political clashes that cost three lives over the weekend.

The government yesterday suspended constitutional guarantees and summoned the national assembly to begin a five-day emergency session starting Friday.

Emergency Follows Shooting

The emergency was declared following a shooting incident between Panama police and supporters of Arias. Although Arias apparently was victorious in the May 9 election, there was a question whether he actually would get the job.

His eligibility was challenged on grounds that Panama's constitution bars anyone elected as President from running again until two terms have elapsed from the date he last held office. Arias, a 47-year-old Nationalist leader, was forced out of the Presidence in a coup in 1941.

Today, along with a dozen other top leaders, Arias entered the Canal Zone. Arias told newsmen that "as you see, my little country is going to hell."

Awaiting Developments

He said that "for the time being I am awaiting developments."

A spokesman for the United States Panama Canal Administration said Arias and the others signed statements agreeing not to engage in political activity.

Today, the Panamanian capital returned to routine activities. The government warned newspaper publishers and radio station owners that censors would be assigned to their establishments if material which the government considers subversive is printed or broadcast.

Army Garrisons Revolt in Peru

Lima, Peru, July 5 (U.P.).—The Peruvian government suspended constitutional guarantees today because of a revolt by army garrisons at Puno and Juliaca in southern Peru.

The government also banned mass meetings in Lima and other cities and warned leaders of the rebellion to lay down their arms.

An official communique said the revolt was headed by Maj. Alsonso Llosa of the Juliaca garrison, who requested the support of other commanders in the south.

The communique said all garrisons except those at Puno and Juliaca "expressed their loyalty to" President Jose Luis Bustamente.

REX HARRISON

Carole Landis Kills Herself

Lilli Palmer, found Miss Landis about 3 p. m. Detective Captain Emmett Jones said she had been dead 10 or 12 hours.

Fanny May Bolden, 37, Miss Landis' maid, told police Harrison had been lunching and dining with Miss Landis regularly for the past couple of weeks. He was at her home for dinner last night.

Miss Bolden said the British actor telephoned her about 11 this morning and asked if Miss Landis had awakened and she said no.

"He told me if she was not up by 2:30 that I should go to her room and awaken her," she said.

He called back, however, and told her not to do so because he was coming over.

Never Reached Stardom

Miss Bolden said she did not see Harrison enter the house, but that he came to her in the kitchen and told her he had found her mistress.

"I think she's dead," she quoted him.

Police said Harrison had no explanation for Miss Landis' action. After questioning him about circumstances under which he found the body, they let him return to his home.

His wife, English actress Lilli Palmer, is in New York, according to a spokesman for Harrison's studio.

When found, Miss Landis was wearing a white lace blouse, a black and white skirt and gold sandals.

Miss Bolden said Miss Landis had been living alone since her separation from Schmidlapp.

Miss Landis never quite achieved stardom, but she appeared in many pictures after being featured in the role of a cave woman in "One Million B. C." in 1940. But her popularity had dwindled during the past 18 months.

A vivacious and shapely blonde, Miss Landis was popular with American troops during her USO appearances overseas and she wrote a book about her travels which later was made into a movie. She was a singer as well as an actress, having started her career as a nightclub performer in San Francisco.

First Wed At 15

She was first married at the age of 15 to writer Irving Wheeler. She later married and divorced broker Willis Hunt jr., and then Capt. Tom Wallace, Army Air Force pilot whom she met overseas. Their romance dulled, too, and she married Schmidlapp.

Her real name was Frances Ridste, daughter of a machinist, Alfred Ridste. A native of Fairchild, Wis., she broke into Hollywood after a publicity man gave her a build-up as the "Ping Girl."

Pictures in which she appeared included "I Wake Up Screaming," "Orchestra Wives," "Powers Girl" and "Four Jills in a Jeep," the latter an account of her travels through North Africa with fellow actresses Martha Raye, Kay Francis and Mitzi Mayfair.

Miss Landis is survived by her father, Alfred L. Ridste of Richmond, Calif.; her mother, Mrs. Clara Landis, Seminole Hot Springs, near Cornell, Calif.; a sister, Mrs. Walter L. Ross, Long Beach, Calif., and a brother, Lawrence B. Ridste, San Bernardino, Calif.

Pastor Starts Dewey Mustache For Party Loyalty

Boston, July 5 (U.P.).—Rev. Louis W. West of South Boston's South Baptist Church began growing a "Thomas E. Dewey mustache" today and pledged himself not to shave it off until the New York Governor is elected President.

What's more, he called on every male member of his congregation to follow his example.

Taking "Show Your Colors" as the theme of his sermon, Rev. West told his congregation yesterday that "most of us in this church are Republicans and the male members have a grand opportunity to show their party loyalty."

New Federal Salary Table

By Jerry Kluttz

This is the new and official Federal salary table as prepared by the General Accounting Office. The table is self-explanatory.

It covers all classified employes in the executive branch as well as workers in the legislative and judicial branches.

Under it, any employe can determine what his paycheck will be under the new flat $330 pay raise and the increase in retirement deductions from 5 to 6 per cent.

In the first left-hand column are the old and new annual salary rates. Find your salary there and follow it across to find out the amount of your bi-weekly paycheck and how it will be computed.

This pay schedule becomes effective the first full pay period after June 30. For most employes here that period will start on July 11 and they will receive their first larger paycheck early in August.

The Government Printing Office is printing about 75,000 copies of the table for distribution to Federal agencies the world over. It's suggested that you save this table for reference.

American Held For Not Having Trans-Jordan Visa

Amman, Trans-Jordan, July 5 (AP).—Police held tonight for investigation an American Jew who was arrested when he arrived here by air from Cairo without a Trans-Jordan visa.

The man identified himself as Donal E. G. Trimpe of Miami, Fla. He said he was en route to Tel Aviv, capital of Israel, to work in the American diplomatic mission as chief clerk. Officials indicated the investigation might be prolonged indefinitely.

Tukan Bey, Trans-Jordan minister to Cairo, requested Trimpe's arrest. Bey arrived on the same Egyptian plane. He said:

"I refused this man a visa in Cairo and he has no right to be in our country."

There was no explanation why the American Embassy in Cairo permitted Trimpe to try to reach Tel Aviv via Trans-Jordan without a visa instead of via British-held Cyprus.

A second American John F. Carlson of San Francisco, arrived on the plane with a Trans-Jordan visa and was cleared.

Educational Opportunities Neglected, NEA Parley Told

Cleveland, July 5 (AP).—The people of the United States are neglecting their obligation to improve the quality of education offered American youth, delegates to the National Education Association Convention heard their president say tonight.

Keynoting the five-day meeting here of 3500 school leaders, Glenn E. Snow of St. George, Utah, NEA president and head of Dixie Junior College, declared:

"During the depression and since, the people of the United States have neglected their obligation to establish a system of training which will make available to all our youth a higher quality of education than we have ever had before.

"Millions of children in this free and wealthy land are not in school at all, and millions more are given very poor educational chance."

Snow criticized leadership in the United States House of Representatives for failing to consider a Senate-approved measure to provide Federal aid, without Federal control, for equalizing educational opportunities.

Selective Service findings, he said, are a warning that the American people must "use their resources through the Federal Government to attack the uneven distribution of educational opportunities among the States.

"Only by such action," he continued, "will it be possible to equip the younger generation to meet its full responsibilities of citizenship."

NEA membership jumped from 219,000 five years ago to more than 440,000 today, Snow reported. But, he added, for the "complexity and magnitude of the tasks which lie before us . . . we should have not 3000 but 6000 locals."

Heavy Rains Damage Several Iowa Areas

Des Moines, July 5 (AP).—Torrential rains ranging up to 6 inches caused damage at several eastern Iowa points early today.

Lowden, in Cedar County, experienced a flash flood after a half a foot of water bucketed down in a three-hour period. Traffic on the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad and on U. S. Highway No. 30 was interrupted for a time.

Other heavy rains included 5.25 inches at the Mississippi River dam northeast of Burlington, 4.73 inches at Wapello, Iowa; 4.50 inches at Morning Sun; 3.71 inches at Muscatine and 2.76 inches at Keokuk.

French Police Detain Planes on U. S. Action

Paris, July 5 (U.P.).—Advices from Nice said tonight that five American planes and their pilots had been detained by French air police on instructions from American authorities.

Officials refused to discuss the situation but advices quoted unofficial sources as saying the planes were being flown to Palestine.

Nice reported that the planes were of single-motored Stinson Norseman freight type, converted for use as light bombers.

The reports said that two of the pilots were Americans, two French and one British.

Veterans' Bonuses

Thirty-one States so far have resisted demands for a World War II veterans' bonus. The cash benefits already voted by eight States, however, amount to four times the total of State bonuses provided after World War I, according to an illuminating survey by the Tax Foundation. Proposals pending in seven more States, if approved, would add another 1200 million dollars, bringing the total State cash payments to 2800 million dollars. This contrasts with the situation after World War I, when a total of 20 States paid cash benefits to former servicemen of not quite 400 million dollars. The final World War I outlay cannot be judged, however, by what the veterans themselves received; most of the payments were financed by bond issues. Several States are still carrying these bonds, and the ultimate cost is estimated to be in the neighborhood of 592 million dollars.

Undoubtedly, Federal largesse has been a big factor in minimizing the pressures upon States after World War II. In passing the GI Bill of Rights and ancillary benefits, Congress recognized the need to help men who risked death and performed incalculable service to the country during long years away from their families and jobs. These timely benefits have made the readjustment of recent veterans far easier than in the past, at least financially. Also, the professional veteran so far has had less of a voice than after World War I. There has been less talk about what the country owes the veteran and more recognition that military service was merely the discharge of a common American obligation directed at saving all our necks. To no small extent this new and more enlightened attitude on the part of former servicemen may be attributed to the spadework of those veterans' organizations which have sought to identify the veteran's interest with the national welfare through such mottoes as "citizens first, veterans second."

In other words, there has been an increasing awareness that bonuses eventually must be paid out of the pockets of taxpayers, including veterans. Whether the movement for more State payments and an eventual Federal bonus can be forestalled, however, is likely to depend far more on whether the country maintains full employment and avoids a depression than on all the preachments, however enlightened.

Voice Control

With the decision of the State Department to take over all operations of the Voice of America broadcasts beginning October 1, the handling of this important segment of the foreign information program has run full circle. The State Department is, of course, the agency in which operation and supervision of the programs belong. They were farmed out to networks in the first place only because of congressional insistence that the operation be privately conducted. The assumption that somehow the quality of broadcasts would thereby be enhanced proved to be false. As long as the Government was paying the bill, no one either here or abroad was kidded that the letting of the programs to private contractors relieved the Government of ultimate responsibility. Yet the same congressional insistence on private operation also deprived the State Department of funds with which to check the broadcasts.

As a matter of fact, the system as set up put a premium on irresponsibility, as was amply demonstrated by the recent criticism in Congress of the tripe that went out to Latin America. Fortunately, Congress repented of the kind of economy that brought this situation about and voted substantially the funds the State Department requested for the coming fiscal year. This increase allows the department to relieve the networks of a job they are glad to be rid of.

As the program is now set up, beginning October 1 the State Department itself will initiate all news reports and commentaries, as it has been doing all along with respect to eastern Europe. It will purchase some outside feature programs, but none will be broadcast until thoroughly reviewed. Meanwhile, in the period before October 1, the department will exercise supervision over all programs still handled by private broadcasters. A further degree of stability for the new operation will be provided by the appointment of the five-man advisory board called for in the Smith-Mundt Act.

The change-over will also afford an opportunity to review the scope of the Voice of America programs. The real focal point of these programs is the influential people of the countries to which they are beamed. Accordingly, in our opinion, the broadcasts could effectively dispense with some of the seemingly inane "bait" with which they sometimes are coated. In any event, the first essential of a successful foreign broadcast program is continuity and responsibility, both of which are provided by the return to full State Department control. The department may rightly be called upon to account fully for the content of the programs; but by the same token, the Voice of America can work most effectively if it is not subjected to continual petty harassments.

Bernadotte's Proposals

The outlook for Palestine has been darkened by the hostile reception accorded preliminary peace proposals by Count Bernadotte which alter materially the November 29 recommendations of the General Assembly. The proposals have now been published. This is just as well though they are intended only as a sort of working paper, with the view of persuading both sides to cooperate in the drawing up of a settlement.

Bernadotte's statement recognizes an independent Israel and a two-year Israel control of immigration, changes the frontiers somewhat, and provides for the disposition of Arab Palestine, which he regards as including Jerusalem. It was to be expected that both sides would reject the proposals as they stand. The Arabs of the Arab League are too disunited to budge from the common denominator of negation toward a constructive solution based upon the realities of Palestine. The Israelis on their part have little room for negotiation. The partition as agreed upon in the General Assembly was a maximum compromise in the eyes of Zionists and partitionists alike. If Israel acquiesced in a radical departure from it, it would invite internal disruption. Its situation is complicated by the result of the brief resort to arms with the Arabs; any alteration of the November recommendations at Israel's expense would be interpreted among the Israelis as a defeat which was not justified by the hostilities.

The chief beneficiary of Arab Palestine under the Bernadotte draft is King Abdullah of Transjordania, the prime adversary on the Arab side in the Jew-Arab collision. To him would go most of what is at present Arab Palestine, though he would find his sovereignty over Transjordania as well as Arab Palestine subjected to "limited" United Nations authority. To this he objects as an abridgment of his sovereignty. The objection has its humorous aspect. Abdullah is sovereign in name only, for the power back of Abdullah is Great Britain, which runs his army and provides his budget. One reason for introducing the United Nations into Transjordania may be that the cession of territory in Arab Palestine to Abdullah must be made palatable to Abdullah's rivals in the Arab League. Another reason may be that the virtual incorporation of Jerusalem into Abdullah's dominion had to be dressed up for the sake of Israel.

If this latter reason was in the mind of the U. N. mediator, it has miscarried, for the proposed status for Jerusalem seems to be the most objectionable aspect of the Bernadotte proposals to the Israelis. To be sure, the 100,000 Jews in Jerusalem are assured of autonomy, but Tel Aviv sees in the cession an unjustifiable handout to Abdullah. In this attitude the Israelis may find support in Britain. For even in Britain most of the opinion expressed on the General Assembly's recommendation picked upon the internationalization of Jerusalem as a constructive provision. Jerusalem is a holy city to Christendom, Jewry, and Islam. To the Moslems, however, it ranks third after Mecca and Medina, both of which are in Ibn Saud's domain. For the Israelis Jerusalem is more than a holy city; it is the great cultural center for Israel, and the Israelis have become more than ever determined since the Arab sacking of the Old City not to leave the monuments to their culture to the tender mercies of a Bedouin chieftain.

It is now reported from Cairo that the Arabs refuse to regard the Bernadotte proposals as the basis for discussion. But we hope that the quest for peace will not be abandoned. This means that the truce, which expires on Friday, must be extended, so that the mediator may explore all avenues to settlement. What Bernadotte needs to enable him to remain at his task is an indication that a new Middle Eastern policy has been concerted by America and Britain resting upon a recognition of the facts in Palestine. The Arabs will remain intransigent so long as they see a division of policy between America and Britain. The time has arrived, it seems to us, to force the issue and to give de jure recognition to Israel and conditional recognition to Abdullah—as a starter for a program of economic reconstruction for the benefit of both and their neighbors. Beyond that Britain and America should work for a regional unit in the Middle East with a geographical and not a race or religious base.

Reservist Pay

The newly announced provisions for paying Army reservists taking inactive duty training ends a disparity that has been responsible at least in part for the disorganized condition of the Army Reserve program. The upturn in interest which is to be expected does not derive from a mercenary motive alone; members of Naval and Marine Reserve units are already being compensated for certain types of training, and the fact that comparable Army training up to now has been a labor of love has left something of a sour taste among participants. Along with the pay benefits, the Army has announced a sensible reorganization of the reserve program directed at integrating members into units to complement the mobile striking force now being formed.

This extension of monetary inducements follows another move to increase the appeal of the reserve program. President Truman has signed a bill making reservists eligible for retirement benefits based on the number of years of active duty and those on inactive status. Although these benefits are rightly far less than those received by members of the regular forces, they will still constitute a recognition of the service of men who have maintained an active interest and part in the national defense.

At the same time President Truman has quite properly called upon the leaders of the Army and the Reserve Corps to stop feuding and work together. Who is right in the dispute that had existed over the allocation of funds and over the complaint that the Reserve Corps has been treated as a sort of illegitimate child is not so important as the need to concentrate on a meaningful reserve training program demonstrably related to today's military requirements. Dissension and disunity between the regular forces and the vital civilian components would be especially intolerable at a time when thousands of young Americans are to be drafted to strengthen the country's military position.

Make Each Vote Count

The Republican plank calling for "a revision of the procedure for the election of the President and Vice President which will more exactly reflect the popular will" did not come out of a clear sky. It is a direct indorsement of the resolution for this purpose sponsored by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. Since Mr. Lodge was chairman of the resolutions committee at Philadelphia, it is not surprising that he should have woven into the platform a favorable reference to what may well have been the most important measure he sponsored in the last Congress. The Republican hierarchy was well advised in any event to accept this constructive proposal. It ought to become a major party objective if they win in November.

There is nothing partisan, however, about the resolution itself. In the House a companion resolution was sponsored by Representative Ed Gossett, a Democrat. The proposal won approval on its merits in the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate, without partisan division. Its acceptance as part of the Constitution would benefit both parties and give the country a more precise system of electing the President. Superficially, it may seem to be of greater interest to the Republican Party because it would unquestionably encourage a Republican invasion of the solid South. Even more important, however, is the rejuvenation of the Democratic Party in the South that might be expected from bringing that area once more into the arena in which presidential contests are fought.

Ever since the days of reconstruction, the South has been taken for granted. There have been occasional breaks in its solid Democratic voting, as in the rebellion against Al Smith in 1928. But for the most part it has not been worth while for a Republican presidential candidate to seek votes in the South and few Democratic candidates have considered it necessary to do any wooing of voters south of the Potomac and the Ohio. Of course, the Republicans similarly take Maine and Vermont for granted. The unit voting system, giving all of each State's electoral votes to the high man, has had the effect of concentrating campaign efforts in a few large strategic States in the East, Middle West and Far West.

Under the proposed amendment, candidates for the Presidency would have only such strength in electoral votes as they could win in popular votes in each State. Every Republican vote in Mississippi and Georgia would thus count toward the election of the Republican candidate and the same would be true of Democratic candidates in Maine and Vermont. The country would have a more accurate expression of the popular will in the choice of the Chief Executive and the danger of electing a candidate with a minority of the popular votes would disappear. The amendment is so obviously desirable from the viewpoint of good government and healthy political development that it might well be indorsed by the Democratic National Convention, too.

Away From The Farm

Last year, the Department of Agriculture estimates, nearly a million and a half persons moved from farms to cities and towns, while only a million migrated in the reverse direction. This urban trek may seem surprising in view of the prevalent prosperity of the farming regions, reflected in record-breaking farm incomes and in soaring values of farmland. However, labor productivity in agriculture has risen greatly in recent years, owing partly to good weather but also to a rapid increase in mechanization on the farm and to improved fertilization. Consequently the labor supply has, in effect, been greatly augmented. Despite prosperity, many farms are too small or too poor to provide an adequate living for families even when prices are high. Finally, the pull of the industrialized communities in periods when jobs are abundant and wages high is always powerful. For the average cash income of farmers is still low compared with the earnings of factory workers, although many farmers who get their living off the land may, in fact, be much better off than city workers.

All these factors help to explain why the farming regions suffer a loss of population when economic conditions are excellent and why, in times of depression, city workers drift back to the farms as factories close down or curtail their operations. The increase in the farm population in 1945 and 1946 was not characteristic, being attributed to the return of demobilized veterans and of civilian workers dislodged from wartime jobs.

Military Establishment

Although your newspaper is noted far and wide for its accuracy, I have noted for some time that you consistently err in the naming of one of the departments of our Government by calling it the "Department of National Defense" instead of its proper title "National Military Establishment."

Page 17 of your issue of June 30 carries a statement, "Planes representing all sectors of the Department of National Defense will fly . . ."

Whether we like the title "National Military Establishment" or not, we must use it until Congress gets around to changing it. The Unification Act of 1947 gave the name to us.

Perhaps the next Congress should bring the title into line with the other departments by changing to Department of Defense. (Canada already has a Department of National Defense.)

I also note (issues of June 20 and June 27) that you call the Pentagon Building the "National Defense Building." I have rechecked with the Public Building Administration of the Federal Works Agency, which has the care of this building, and I learned that the proper name is still the Pentagon, and that there is no intention of changing it. The positive statement you made in this regard is in error.

So, until they get around to officially changing the names of our Government departments, in the interests of reportorial accuracy you should call them by their proper names. READER.

'Campaign' Against Russia

In the campaign being waged against the one nation that saved us all, facts are the last things dealt in. Every charge is suppositional. A thousand columns rage that Russia "intends," "has plans," "plots world dominion." "It is to be inferred" . . . "The men of the Kremlin conspire." "Russia thinks." "She has ambitions." "She is going to attack."

And we who keep shouting that an iron curtain shuts off all information are always revealing sinister plots going on behind said curtain. Our editors rave that they know what the Russians think and that we should marshal our bombs and destroy men, women and children for what they think—or what we think they think.

No falsehood is too glaring, too preposterous, to emanate from the "presstitutes" of hysteria. Russia is "aggressive" — although no boundary line is violated. Nowhere has this wounded nation invaded a neutral, or violated a treaty, yet to read our frantics she has "annexed" Czechoslovakia, Finland and Hungary—in fact, all the occupied enemy lands.

As for all the horror stories of outrages against her own citizens, if our screaming editors were sincere, they would rejoice, hoping that the bloody Communists would exterminate their own race and save us the trouble.

Merchant Veterans

I wish to call your attention to a vital problem facing a small minority of draft-eligible young men of this country. This is the problem of the merchant marine veteran.

It is an established fact that during the first year of this war, casualties in the merchant marine were considerably greater proportionally than those of the armed forces. High-pressure recruiting was conducted by various Government agencies to induce men to join the merchant marine. Many men did, young men who gave up jobs, schooling, security, just as did those of the armed forces, to do a hazardous job vital to the country's security. And all men of the merchant marine served "overseas." There were no desk jobs.

At the end of the war, when the old selective service law was still in effect, merchant marine personnel with a minimum of two years' war service were issued "certificates of substantial service," to correspond to the armed forces discharge, and were placed in a draft-exempt category along with veterans of the forces.

These "discharged" seamen came ashore and went through the difficult process of rehabilitating themselves to a civilian way of life (without benefit of educational privileges and other aids extended to forces veterans), and most of them are now settled down to the job of making up for lost time in education, jobs, and becoming part of the normal community.

Then comes the new draft law which, if nothing is done, will tear up the replanted roots of merchant marine veterans, most of whom are in the age group 22 to 25, and it will be practically impossible for them to salvage anything of their personal plans after a further lengthy "hitch."

Unless some action is taken (executive deferment by the President being the only means presently feasible), there will be a small group, small and voiceless, who are not going to have a very favorable opinion of the equity and justice of our Government.

Anne Arundel Park

I want to offer a suggestion for the location of the State of Maryland public park in Anne Arundel County—a far more convenient location than the St. Margarets section and containing at present acres upon acres of virgin soil covered with brush and trees and serving no useful purpose.

Considerable space has been devoted in newspapers relative to the proposed location at an airfield at the St. Margarets section, near Annapolis, by the Navy.

One of the large landowners in the St. Margarets section has offered to transfer over 700 acres which he owns to the State of Maryland for a consideration for use as a public park. This section is least suited for a public park.

There is considerable virgin land—and only 1 mile outside of Annapolis—that is at present a vast waste and containing brush, trees and discarded rubbish. If this land were used, it should be possible to eliminate many hazardous intersections on the State and county roads—and the traffic over these roads is tremendous on weekends and holidays—and at the same time provide for recreational facilities for local and visiting residents which are so much needed these days.

Eisenhower Talk

There is appearing what seems to be a small politically unsavory group, within the Democratic Party, who by their schemes reflect on the integrity and word of honor of one of our great generals. Every true American resents this, and are getting fed up with these rumors for political purposes of a "draft" or "availability."

It's pretty low politics to use a general's name in order to "knife their own chief in the back," a President who is in office because he was so designated by the late F. D. R. to succeed him.

UMT And The Negro

It was interesting to read an article in the current issue of the Negro Digest (current issue), on universal military training by such luminaries as A. Phillips Randolph and Grant Reynolds, whom we all know as stanch defenders of the social and economic rights of the Negro. Without attempting to quote either of the two, one could characterize their position as advocating civil disobedience on the part of the Negro, if and when he was drafted for military training, unless certain rights and privileges were granted him, and these rights written into the bill for universal military training.

To be sure, every Negro and, a large number of white citizens deeply appreciate the need for elimination of prejudice in any area of our American society; this will enhance the very democracy that we boast of and desire to create and vouchsafe. It is not yet a perfect democracy by any stretch of the imagination, and it will not be perfect as long as it has at the very core of its framework, pressure groups, "hooded klans" and even a complacent and misguided intelligentsia.

Dissatisfaction with conditions such as these is a dynamo which should initiate thought and activity to bring about a change for the better. Various methods can be used and have been used down through the ages with a large measure of success, but I wonder if conditions call for so stringent a measure as "civil disobedience."

It is one's inalienable right to hate, to fight against, to denounce which placates a people and a minority group, robbing them of their civil rights, but "civil disobedience" is revolution, and as such, it is born of the same spirit as a "lynch mob" which we bitterly denounce and seek legislation to prevent.

Such a procedure will unleash upon America, in all classes and races, the momentum and the urge and the concomitant desire, which was the springboard for the building of a Nazi Germany and a communistic Russia. One should beware, lest, in his method of seeking to establish democracy, he destroy the very object of his quest.

Rather would I, as a Negro, read the history of human relations in America; yes, I'd see that we have a long way to go to reach perfection, but I would also see that we have come a long way from our humble beginning. It is good, and is continually encouraging to me, to know that in this America of ours, with all her faults and failures (and yet with all her potential greatness), there grew a Paul L. Dunbar, a Gen. Benjamin Davis, a George Washington Carver, Booker T. Washington, Roland Hayes, Marion Anderson, Joe Louis, Joseph C. Price, Bishops Varick and Allen, and a host of others who have met and conquered the ostracisms of the ages and now hold converse with the lords of the earth in their several spheres in the great parliaments of men.

Civil disobedience is not anybody's civil right, and it, like the revolution it will engender, will eventually destroy the one who conceives it. Evolution builds slowly, 'tis true, but it builds surely and irrevocably.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Monument's Meaning

THIS IS the centennial of a monument. Just a century ago the cornerstone of the Washington Monument was put in place.

There are a great many monuments in Washington. Some are ugly, some memorialize forgotten men, some are just plain misplaced and ludicrous. But through a fortunate combination of circumstances the monument to Washington was made to fit the greatness of the man.

In its simplicity, its dignity, its grandure, that soaring shaft of marble could not be excelled. Even as the Capital has grown and the greedy and the self-seeking have from time to time seemed to take over, it has remained to remind the doubters and the disillusioned of what courage, integrity, character can mean.

Solid and enduring as the monument is, it has its moods and its moments. I think I like it best in October when the great elms around the Mall have lost their leaves and the light is clear and sharp.

You can hardly see it, even though you see it a thousand times, without thinking of the man whom it memorializes. As he was the chief architect of our independence, slaving and toiling and sweating for it, so he should have the chief monument in the city that bears his name.

FOR THIS anniversary Chalmers M. Roberts has put together a book of pictures and text, The Washington Monument, the Story of a National Shrine.

It contains a great many interesting facts about the obelisk that dominates the horizon of the Capital.

Among the 20,000 persons present on July 4, 1848, when the cornerstone was laid, were six men who were to occupy the White House. One was President James K. Polk and another was former President Martin Van Buren. James Buchanan, Secretary of State in the Polk Cabinet, was among the dignitaries.

Abraham Lincoln was present that day, an obscure member of Congress from Illinois. So were two other Congressmen who would eventually move into the White House, Millard Fillmore and Andrew Johnson.

In the competition for a prize-winning design, all sorts of monstrosities were submitted, including a Victorian gimcrack closely resembling, if one may judge from the design, the hideous Albert Memorial in London. Indian pagodas and Italian renaissance towers were among the proposals submitted to the committee that proposed to raise the funds by public subscription.

In the original design for the obelisk, its base was to have been a pantheon containing portraits and mementoes of Revolutionary heroes. Fortunately, the pantheon concept got lost at some point or other and what we have today is the simple obelisk.

Public subscription raised the monument to 154 feet by 1854. There it stopped until Congress took over in the midst of the centennial fervor in 1876. Then again zealous architects came forward with new and elaborate ideas. But again the obelisk was preserved.

IN DECEMBER, 1884, the apex was completed, and on Washington's Birthday the following year the aluminum capstone was set in place at 550 feet and the monument was dedicated. An oration written by the venerable Robert C. Winthrop, who had been Speaker of the House in 1848, was read.

"The storms of winter," Winthrop had written, "must blow upon it. The action of the elements must soil and discolor it. An earthquake may shake its foundations. Some mighty tornado or resistless cyclone may rend its massive blocks asunder and hurl huge fragments to the ground. But the character, which it commemorates and illustrates, is secure. It will remain unchanged and unchangeable in all its consummate purity and splendor, and will more and more command the homage of succeeding ages in all regions of the earth."

That brings us down to our time. Representative Christian Herter of Massachusetts likes to tell about an incident that occurred when he was with an UNRRA mission in Yugoslavia in 1946. He was traveling in a jeep with the wife of the minister of war. She was a fiery Communist who talked at length about the glories of the new Yugoslavia. When Herter had been silent a long time, she suddenly said, "Don't you love your country?"

The startled Herter replied that he did love it very much. "Then why don't you talk about it?" she demanded.

Most of us take for granted what we have with a complacency that is often downright smugness. That soaring shaft should be a reminder of a day when men struggled and fought and died for the freedom we enjoy.

Smoking Hazards

I read the June 24 letter by A. L. A. on smoking hazards and wholeheartedly agree. The Government pretends to be interested in the health of its employes, yet it jeopardizes our health by permitting smoking in its offices. We sit in smoke-filled rooms eight hours per day and try to do efficient work when our eyes are so full of smoke we can hardly see and our throats so dry we nearly choke.

Hours of time and money are wasted by these smoke fiends who, I believe, cannot work (or pretend to work) without being doped with nicotine. This applies to women as well as men. Something should be done for the benefit of those who are allergic to smoke and whose working hours are made miserable by these inconsiderate smoking employes. No wonder there is so much sinus trouble.

Berlin Showdown

By Sumner Welles

The Beginning Of The Crisis

THE LOOMING showdown in Berlin is the most spectacular of the many signs that the anticipated European crisis may be near.

In the last three years' contest of power politics the Kremlin has been defeated in secondary engagements in Italy and in Greece; it has so far been contained in France and in the rest of western Europe: and it has as yet won no conclusive victories in Asia or the Near East. Its prestige in Europe has, at least momentarily, been weakened by the revolt against its authority in the Balkans. Yet it has not been deflected one inch from the line that it has set for itself in order to dominate continental Europe and Asia.

Russia cannot gain supremacy in Europe unless she can control Germany. The prospects for eventual Russo-German collaboration are greater today than at any time since the end of the war.

While the Soviet regime has been inflexible in its purpose, the Western allies have wavered. Even now they have no fixed policy in Germany. For lack of consistency and because of administrative incapacity they have needlessly lost several of the great tactical advantages they enjoyed in 1945.

Three years ago the defeated and submissive German people looked to the Western powers as their one hope of salvation from Russia. Today German nationalism is resurgent and an increasing number of Germans believe that Germany's survival depends upon parinership with Russia.

THREE YEARS ago the Germans were convinced that the determination of their future rested in American hands. Today the Germans see the Soviet Union demonstrate that it can prevent the United States from providing two million Germans in Berlin with even the bare necessities of life.

Three years ago the Western allies were united. Today the phony Russian peace offensive and the Berlin war of nerves have begun to undermine Western unity. It is all very well for General Clay to announce, with Washington's approval, that the Russians "could not drive us out of Berlin short of war." But French public opinion has already clearly shown that it deprecates any course in Berlin that might result in an open clash. And the leaks from London make it evident that the British government is far from eager, notwithstanding Mr. Bevin's statements, to indorse General Clay's blank check.

The instructions delivered by Molotov at the Warsaw meeting directed the Communist parties in western Europe to create internal disorders designed to lessen the possibility that the western European government would back vigorous American action. Strikes have since been called that have threatened to tie up Britain's ports, to prevent the harvesting of Italy's desperately needed crops, and to cripple France's public services and communications.

The horns of our dilemma are apparent. We cannot be sure of more than tepid French and British support. We cannot continue indefinitely to supply by air the needs of two million Germans.

THE KREMLIN does not have to use force. All it has to do is wait. It knows that public opinion here would never permit two millions of human beings under American jurisdiction to suffer slow starvation. It is wishful thinking to maintain that the Russians will give in because they fear German resentment. The Russian alibi will be that if the Western powers evacuate Berlin, its inhabitants would be adequately provided for, and that their distress is solely due to this Government's refusal to agree to a united Germany and to its demand that the Germans be kept in eternal subjugation.

The impasse in Berlin justifies the query why this Government has allowed a situation, with all of these dangerous implications, to reach a stage where it can only be settled either by submission to Russia's demands, or by resort to armed resistance if that be forced upon us.

Recourse to negotiations "at the top level," as the British Foreign Office is urging upon us, can at this late hour merely offer the Russians a new chance for propaganda designed to intensify German nationalism, and another opportunity to try to browbeat the Western allies into agreeing to some weak compromise that will ultimately result in a unified Germany under a centralized government with Russian participation in control of the Ruhr.

WITHDRAWAL from Berlin under Russian pressure would be a major blow to American authority in Europe. It would convince the German people that they cannot look to the West for security. It would immeasurably increase Russia's chances of later controlling all of Germany.

As Winston Churchill warned the other day, this is a determining moment.

The United States cannot afford to retreat from the advanced position where her own faulty diplomacy has placed her. There is too much at stake. The decision, far-reaching as it is, is rendered easier by the fact that the weaknesses that have suddenly appeared in the Soviet system make it improbable that the Kremlin will run the risk of hostilities.

Soldiers' Home Woodcarver's Hobby Pays

George Eggers Began Art at 60; Work Now Wins Him High Praise

Life at Soldiers' Home would be pretty quiet for a man who has never had time to sit back and take things easy.

That's why former potwasher, draftsman, electrician, seaman and contractor, George C. Eggers, took up woodcarving at the age of 60 to while away the time when he first came to the home four years ago. And as result, time has passed profitably and his labors won him praise as well.

Eggers sold $54 worth of his wooden figurines after a Takoma Park fair in which he exhibited several weeks ago. "They told me I was the only one who sold anything," he says.

Eggers carves his figures out of cedar fence posts, using three boxes full of delicately sharpened tools. He picks the fence posts up around the grounds but complains that "you can't get good tools any more." He has made a lot of his own from hacksaw blades.

"I make mostly character pieces," he says. "They're the hardest."

Eggers gets his ideas from magazines or his own imagination, makes a full-size sketch of the figure, and then transfers this to the wooden block. He use a combination of French varnish, alcohol and shellac for the deep, rich finish on his pieces.

Carving is just another venture for Eggers, who says "I have been everything."

Eggers was a seaman; he worked as a lumberman in Seattle, an electrician in the Rocky Mountain Big Creek project near Los Angeles, a contractor in Oakland, Calif., and was the proprietor of a roadside stand in Los Angeles.

He started out as a cavalryman in the First World War, ended up as a steward in the officers' mess. "I told 'em I could cook better chow than that," he says. "They put me to work at it and then I couldn't get out of it."

Biggest mistake the confirmed bachelor made was to buy a pecan farm in Augusta, Ga., back in 1938. "They seen me coming," he says sadly, recalling the large sum of money he lost on the deal.

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

George Eggers works on a wood carving

Eggers had no formal art training but his youthful experience as a draftsman stands him in good stead. "I used to dabble in watercolors," he confesses, and says he even taught an art class for a while in Seattle.

And now despite his current success, he says "I been considering the tool business. Got a couple patents drawn up for some vises. They're not much at good hand tools in this country, you know."

British Planes Collide

Lossiemouth, Scotland, July 5 (AP).—Two Royal Navy Seafire fighter planes collided in flight today and crashed in flames two miles apart. One pilot was killed. The other parachuted to safety.

Joan A Mother Again

Hollywood, July 5 (AP).—A July 4th baby was the fourth girl for actress Joan Bennett. The baby was born by Caesarean section at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. The daughter, named Shelley, weighed 6 pounds 4 ounces.

Negotiators Seek to Avoid Electric Strike

St. Louis, July 5 (AP).—Negotiators worked feverishly today trying to avoid a scheduled electrical workers' strike that would blackout industry throughout a large area of the Mississippi river valley.

The walkout is planned for 7 a. m. EST) Tuesday.

M. E. Skinner, vice president in charge of sales for Union Electric Company of Missouri, said the utility would begin cutting power to non-essential users at midnight tonight if no agreement was in sight at that time.

Essential Users Listed

Included among "essential" users were hospitals, communication systems, newspapers and radio stations, some transportation and cold storage plants. Electric service would be maintained for homes in the area as far as possible.

Settlement of the dispute over pay appeared certain Friday night when officials of the company and the AFL operating engineers reached an agreement, but members of the union voted down the agreement in elections here and at Keokuk, Iowa, Saturday.

George Ferguson, president of Local 148, said the men were dissatisfied with the 11½-cent-an-hour average raise called for in the original settlement. The union has demanded a flat 15-cent-an-hour increase. The 982 workers involved now receive an average of $1.39 an hour.

Thousands of Idle Seen

George C. Smith, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, estimated that at least 500,000 persons in the St. Louis area alone would be made idle and that other thousands would be thrown out of work in eastern Missouri, southern Illinois and southern Iowa.

Workers of the utility in Missouri would continue at their jobs under a State public utility anti-strike law but the three plants that would not be affected by the strike could supply only 15 to 25 per cent of the power needs of the area.

MacArthur Reviews 7000 Allied Troops

Tokyo, July 5 (U.P.).—An estimated 7000 Allied troops marched past Gen. Douglas MacArthur today in the third Independence Day parade of the American occupation.

Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger led the troops, and then went into the reviewing stand beside MacArthur.

Corinth Canal Reopened

Athens, Greece, July 5 (U.P.).—The Corinth Canal, one of the greatest man-made canals in the world, was reopened today after being closed for seven years due to wartime damage. It was rebuilt with American aid.

Week's Auto Output of 90,000 Seen as Production Spurts

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—The Nation's automobile plants probably will produce close to 90,000 vehicles this week.

That volume, despite the closing of all plants for the holiday, will reflect an increased production tempo through most of the industry.

Unless most industry analysts are wrong, the current month will see half a million cars and trucks roll from the assembly lines. It would be the first time since June, 1941, that United States factory output reached that figure.

The assembly plants almost hit that level in March of this year with an output of 492,013 vehicles.

Since then, however, materials shortages, labor disputes and work stoppages for other reasons have held production down.

Even at half a million units a month the car industry still will be using only about 75 per cent of its capacity. But because of the difficulty in keeping supply lines filled, it probably will not reach capacity operations at any time during the remainder of the year.

The industry's biggest problem since the war has been to get enough sheet steel. That difficulty is far from licked, but the car makers are a little more optimistic than they were six months ago.

Inquiry Is Begun Into Air Collision That Killed 39

London, July 5 (AP).—Ministry of aviation officials pushed an inquiry today into the collision of two four-engine planes near London yesterday which killed 39, including two Americans.

One plane was a Swedish Douglas DC-6 of the Scandinavian Airlines System, the other a Royal Air Force York.

The Swedish plane carried 25 passengers and 7 crewmen. Aboard the RAF plane were Sir Edward Gent, British high commissioner for the Federation of Malaya, and six crew members.

The U. S. citizens killed were Frank Wederholt of Jay Madden Corp., New York, and Richard Borger of the Union Carbide Co., New York.

Bumper Wheat Crops Reported by Russia

London, July 5 (AP).—The Russian wheat harvest is well ahead of 1947 and all areas are reporting bumper crops, the official Soviet news agency Tass said tonight.

Tass said 5,000,000 acres have been harvested. In the Rostov region, the report said, whole collective farms are taking in "up to a ton of grain per acre."

Captive Mine Strike Called

but Harry M. Moses, chief negotiator for the steel companies, described this stockpile as limited. Other industry sources said the firms, in event of a strike, would have to begin curtailing steel production long before the 41 days are up.

Government officials also feared the strike might spread to "commercial" fields in the form of sympathy walkouts. Although a completely separate operation, many of them adjoin the "captive" mines.

Steel Firms Plan Rationing of Coal

Pittsburgh, July 5 (U.P.).—The Nation's 10 biggest steel companies today started plans for rationing of coal on the eve of a strike in the "captive" mines which they own.

While the "captive" mines will remain idle, choking off fuel supplies to the basic steel companies, miners at the commercial pits will return to work Tuesday after their annual 10-day vacation.

One UMW district president in the heart of the captive coal fields of western Pennsylvania said unqualifiedly: "There will be a strike."

Rationing of coal will start almost at once but there will be no immediate effect on steel production. After a week or so of operating at the present near-capacity rate, blue prints on production curtailment will come out of the drawers and the steel mills will start to slow down.

Oxon Hill Citizens To Discuss Sanitation

The Oxon Hill Citizens Association will discuss summer recreation and sanitary zoning tonight at 8 o'clock meeting at Oxon Hill High School, 6300 block Livingston rd. se.

Reports are scheduled on the possibility of obtaining the use of a swimming pool and picnic ground for community use during the summer. Henry Shaw, deputy chief engineer of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, will explain the effect of zoning on property values and the future development of the community.

Discussion Planned On Law Enforcement

A penal discussion on law enforcement in Arlington will be the main event at a meeting of the Democratic Club of Arlington today at 8:15 p.m. in the Lyon Park Community House, Pershing dr. and Fillmore st., Arlington.

Panel members are: Denman T. Rucker, Commonwealth attorney; Henry L. Woodyard, chief of police; Elwood Clements, sheriff; moderator, Thomas E. Edwards.

Weeds Give Way For New Play Area

"Hey, Tommy, t'row ball!"

The neighborhood children are having a wonderful time, scampering around their "playground" at Trinidad ave. and Childress st. ne.

Two weeks ago it was a broad expanse of chest-high weeds, dotted with some empty beer cans and other debris. It's not much of a playground yet, but neighborhood residents have hopes that some day in the not-too-distant future it will be a real recreation center.

"We need a recreation center very badly," said Albert W. Kraft of 1730 Lang pl. ne., chairman of the recreation committee of the Trinidad Citizens Association.

"A survey we made showed that if we had a center there, 2000 children in the area would use it," he said.

Officially operated by the District Board of Recreation, unofficially aided by a host of enthusiatstic neighborhood children, the play area was opened June 25 after the weeds were cut to grass-level.

It covers a large sector eventually intended to include one or two schools and a recreation center, bounded by Trinidad ave., Childress st., Mount Olivet rd. and Holbrook st.

"We're trying to make as much use of it as we can until plans are more definite," said Miss Sybil Baker, assistant superintendent of recreation. "We can't put very much money into its development until we know just how much space will be allotted to us."

When that day comes it will be the Trinidad Recreation Center. At present, it consists of an embryo softball field, an improvised basketball court, and such other sports as horseshoe pitching and volleyball.

To provide occasional movies, a neighbor, George E. Schuler of 1633 Trinidad ave., has agreed to furnish electricity during the summer through a connection to his house.

A playground director, Tom S. Tulenko, 22, of 1734 Massachusetts ave. se., a Duke University sophomore, has been assigned to the area by the Recreation Board.

Dominating the scene with Tulenko, in an informal capacity, is 14-year-old Ernest Postorino, jr., of 1607 Trinidad ave. ne.

"Ernie," one of seven children of a shoemaker, made establishment of the playground a major ambition. He is the youngest member of the Trinidad Citizens Association, and the play area's softballs, bats, volleyballs, etc., are stored in his father's garage for want of a field house.

Children of all ages, from wadding tots to those in their late teens have already "discovered" the play area.

"It's just what we've needed for years," said 61-year-old Frank E. Judy of 1331 Childress st. ne. "We've been trying to get these children off the streets, and into a supervised playground. We hope they can do more with it—it could be a wonderful thing."

NOT MUCH—Short on equipment but high on spirit, that's the new "playground" at Trinidad ave. and Childress st. ne. Playground Director Tom S. Tulenko, 22, of 1734 Massachusetts ave. se., doles out some of the meager equipment to children. Receiving the softball is 14-year-old Ernest Postorino, jr., of 1607 Trinidad ave. ne., unofficial major domo, who gathered support that turned a vacant lot into the playground

Marines Need Trophy Hall

Those battling Marines have accumulated so many trophies and souvenirs of combat they now are seeking a larger place to keep them in.

At Quantico, Va., the Marine Corps' present museum is literally overflowing.

Twenty-five cases of flags, weapons, surrender documents and similar relics of battles that made the Marines famous are having to be housed in the base's recreation building.

Twenty-five or more other cases are jammed into a storage room, brought out only for recruiting tours, simply because there isn't enough room in the museum's 30-by-60-foot display room.

The Marine museum was established at Quantico in 1940 by Gen. Thomas Holcomb, then Marine Corps commandant. It now contains one of the largest collections of souvenirs and relics of World War II.

The famous Iow Jima flag, raised February 23, 1945, on Mount Surabachi, is there, badly frayed and with a couple of bullet holes in it.

So is "Old Faithful," Gen. Alexander A. Vandergrift's private jeep, which went through Guadacanal and the Solomons with him. The battered vehicle, finally retired for old age after Bougainville, is now stuck away in a shed because there are no facilities for exhibiting it on the museum floor.

The museum is not strictly a World War II affair, however. It contains hundreds of weapons from every campaign the Marines have fought in since the Revolution.

D. C. Cleric Hits Beauty Contests

The Rev. Henry W. Snyder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, regards beauty contests as "a form of indecency" even when they are "under the guise of sports or athletics."

Dr. Snyder told his congregation Sunday he was "heartily in favor" of the statement recently made by Bishop John J. Swint of the Wheeling (W. Va.) Catholic diocese, threatening to excommunicate any girl in his diocese who took part in a beauty contest.

"I wish we could have more of that kind of attitude," declared Dr. Snyder.

IT'S HERE The Fifth Installment of that Thrilling Serial
"FROM $20 A DAY TO $2,000,000 A YEAR"

Chapter Five—"Our Reconversion"

Previous installments told of our beginning in the tiny corner of a drug store, our growth throughout the war.

EVERYBODY knows when Johnny came marching home to be reconverted—but it's difficult to record the exact date that liquor returned to the liquor business. We began to notice the gradual appearance of larger quantities about the time customers started snarling at the sales clerks around town, "Don'tcha know there's a peace on?" . . .

It was the dawn of a new era and it didn't take Plain Old Pearson's long to catch on to reconversion. This was what we had been waiting for. We wanted to see thousands of new faces . . . sell thousands of bottles of whiskey at ridiculously low prices!

So we started planning. We'll have to cut overhead to the bone, we decided with determination. We'll have to buy HUGE stocks of whiskey to get the greatest possible discount, we mumbled in our beards. So we bought the whiskey, added a few pennies a bottle to cost and that was our selling price. We would rather make 10c each on 10,000 bottles, than 50c each on 500 bottles.

We were ready to tell the world about our mad scheme, our fine liquor, and our low prices. So we took a big ad in the papers, and bared our souls in print (along with some brands and prices). The response fulfilled our fondest dreams. John Q. Public liked it, and Plain Old Pearson's began to ring with the happy sound of the cash register in action.

Again and again we told the customers how OUR economies meant lower prices. One customer said: "You folks certainly pinch the pennies—but I'm not complaining—your prices are better." That's the way we liked to hear 'em talk. Next week we took a full page ad to quote this customer's comment. We even showed Plain Old Pearson's squeezing the copper.

Our customers are the world's nicest people—and they have the best sense of humor. One of them even paid for some whiskey with a check made out to "Penny-Pinching Pearson's." We told the public to buy here and put the pennies they saved in their piggy banks. So they called us "Piggy Bank Pearson's!"

People were forever calling us names—always characterizing our peculiarities. "What's in a name?" we tossed off in a literary frame of mind, "just so they talk about us—and buy from us?" We were the most discussed liquor store in the country, and we loved it.

Folks from Maine to California visiting in Washington would stop at Plain Old Penny-Pinching Piggy-Bank Pearson's. All went well until one day a man told us he had walked by the store three times trying to locate us. "It's that dinky, dirty, beat-up old sign. Why don't you get a new one?"

Well! That injured our pride. Dejectedly we looked at the object of slander. Yet, it was dilapidated.

So we called in the best neon sign man in the city. He stroked his chin, squinted, and finally estimated $1500 for a fancy new neon job. We told him we'd let him know.

Then we asked our customers about a $1500 neon sign. One lady put it this way: "Is this your idea of keeping down the overhead? $1500 for a new sign! And I guess I'll have to pay part of it!" That did it. No new sign. Instead, we decided we'd give the $1500 to our customers.

We'd have a really big sale . . . we'd sell each of three famous brands of whiskey for only 89c a fifth! We set the sale for 5 to 7 in the evening, so the government workers would have an even break. The announcement brought such a line of customers by 4 o'clock that it took 4 policemen to direct traffic!

Those two hours saw a lot of liquor cross our counter, but fast! At 7 there was still a big crowd lined up. We had promised the public a bargain and they were going to get it—we stationed a man at the end of the line at exactly 7 o'clock and everyone in front of him got his bottle. That $1500 neon sign we DIDN'T buy had been broken up into dividends for hundreds of our customers.

You like a happy ending? Well every one was very happy—except the neon sign man!

Climbing Bosox Clout Yankees Twice, 6-5, 8-7

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IT'S SOME KIND of a special tribute to Joe DiMaggio that in a year when he isn't hitting .300, there still is no general agreement that the .386-hitting Ted Williams is the more valuable all player. The case they make out for DiMaggio is, of course, that he has much more going for him than his batting average.

POVICH

In a week when DiMaggio is laboring to pull up his .298 average, a dispatch from Boston relates in mock alarm that Williams' hitting has "slumped" to .386. The Boston Thin Man is having one of his better seasons and DiMaggio one of his worst, yet there is nothing clear-cut about Williams' greater value.

When DiMaggio isn't getting on base or knocking runs home for the Yankees, he's contributing a variety of other comforts like making the best catches in the business, except his brother, Dominic, or petrifying base runners with the threat of his throws, or throwing 'em out . . .

IN ALL THESE THINGS, you'd have to mark Williams deficient, because even his best friends don't rate him a good outfielder. He's better than a stumble-bum, though. It's only when he is stacked against DiMaggio in comparison that he takes a bad beating. There isn't the resolution in Williams' play that DiMaggio features, and sometimes it borders on a lack of interest.

It has been said of Williams, and it could be true, that he isn't interested much in outfielding—only in hitting. One of his biographers stated a couple of years ago that "the only reason Ted likes to make a putout in the outfield is because that will bring him to bat quicker." He's happy only when he's hitting, he says himself.

But when Williams is hitting, you see the master. It's some kind of a paradox. He's careless about his fielding, his throwing and his base running, but he's the most intent student of batting in the game and the fact that he's a natural hitter hasn't disposed him to let it go at that. Nobody studies the pitchers with such diligence—not even DiMaggio.

THE PRO-DIMAGGIO folks make much of the fact that Williams cannot carry a team like DiMaggio can, despite Ted's lofty batting averages. Williams has been bordering the .400 mark almost from the start of the season, but it was not a case of "As Williams goes, so go the Red Sox." Boston was still deep in the second division when Ted was a .405 hitter.

In contrast is DiMaggio's ability to spark a team. Even with a .298 average, DiMag is the bellwether of the Yanks, and has had them crowding the Indians and A's for the lead all season. DiMaggio's hitting is like a pick-up to the whole Yankee cast, and it is significant that at a time when he is batting almost 100 points less than Williams, he has driven in almost as many runs, 72-70.

New York fans' affection for DiMaggio is understandable. He's levelling all the time. He isn't the fastest man in the league, but he rounds first base farther on a single than any other man in it, always ready for the break that might permit him an extra base. The batting averages don't describe adequately his worth to his club.

Even when he hit the ball 415 feet on the fly in the last World Series, DiMaggio was the victim of Al Gionfrido's catch, but more bitter than that was the time his brother Dominic robbed him in deep center after a 450-foot clout. That's when Joe, in disbelief that such a ball could be caught, muttered at Dominic, "I oughta sue our father."

It's easy to say so many nice things about DiMaggio, yet what are you going to do with a guy like Williams of whom it is said he's in a slump when he isn't hitting .400. One thing you can say is you'd like to have him on your side.

Hot Springs, Va., July 5 (AP).—Wynsol Spencer, Newport News insurance salesman, won the Virginia State amateur golf championship today by defeating Richard Payne of Norfolk, 6 to 5, over the Cascades course.

It was the second time Spencer had copped the title. He won it first in 1939.

Spencer's 4-under-par 67 won him medalist honors in this year's tournament in the qualifying round Thursday.

Boys Title Won By Bladensburg

Bladensburg defeated Lanham, 5-0, and 10-2, yesterday to win the Prince Georges County Boys Club League championship at Bladensburg High field. Matt Liberator pitched one-hit ball in the first game, while Tommy Reed hurled a two-hitter in the nightcap.

In another league double-header, Edmondston downed Cheverly, 13-4, and 16-1, at Fletcher Field.

Gillenwater's Homer Wins 1st as Nats Break Even

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nats' Griffith Stadium clientele, 23,044 strong, welcomed the locals home yesterday, and before the sweltering afternoon was over the Athletics were also glad the Griffs had returned.

Mickey Haefner supplied the pitching and Carden Gillenwater the hitting—a two-run homer—in the opener which the Nats won, 3-1, but the Athletics furnished the misery for the later stayers, a 14-hit attack which produced a 12-5 triumph in the nightcap.

The Nats' triumph shoved them into a tie for fifth with the Tigers, but the walloping the Griffs received later put them back in their place, sixth, as Detroit split a pair with Cleveland. The Mackmen remained in second.

Six Hits off Mickey

Haefner, treated roughly lately, pitched one of his better games, restricting the A's to six hits before he was relieved in the ninth.

Gillenwater furnished the muscle to bring the little lefthander his fourth success by belting out his second homer of the season, a hefty poke which landed in Row 3 of the sunworshippers' section in the left-centerfield stands.

Gillenwater's wallop came in the fourth innin ggainst Joe Coleman and found Ed Stewart, who had singled, on base.

It rubbed out a 1-0 advantage the A's gave Coleman in the second inning. Ferris Fain and Hank Majeski singled and when Al Kozar booted Elmer Valo's roller, the A's had the bases loaded and none out. Buddy Rosar flied to Stewart to score Fain.

Majeski tried to make third on the throw to the plate, but Vernon cut off Stewart's relay throw to Yost and Rosar's run-producing fly resulted in a double play. It also got Haefner out of the only real jam he was in.

He didn't permit another Mack to reach second until the ninth. Two tried it on attempted steals but they were cut down by Jake Early's perfect tosses.

The Nats picked up their final run in the seventh on Mark Christman's double against the leftfield wall and another double, this one a blooper into center, by Eddie Yost.

With one away in the ninth, Majeski doubled and Haefner departed. The fans didn't like it but Manager Joe Kuhel, taking no chances, wheeled in Forrest Thompson and the chubby little southpaw retired the last two A's to wind up the game.

Thompson also saw action in the nightcap, but he came in after four other Nat hurlers had pitched the A's to their victory.

Rae Scarborough started out as Phil Marchildon's pitching opponent, but Scarborough didn't finish the first inning. The A's bumped him for four hits and two runs in the one third of an inning he worked, but that was only a sample of what was to come.

Young Dick Welteroth, relifer No. 1, pitched himself out of the game in the second inning when he loaded the bases on walks. Ray Coleman unloaded them for the A's with a triple, this off Earl Harrist, and one of the two he smacked. Ten Athletics batted in that four-inning round.

Candini Is Hit Hard

Milo Candini, pitcher No. 3, held the Macks to a lone run in the third, but when they touched him for four more tallies in the fourth when they batted around again. Thompson made his second appearance of the day and held the visitors to one run and three hits the rest of the way.

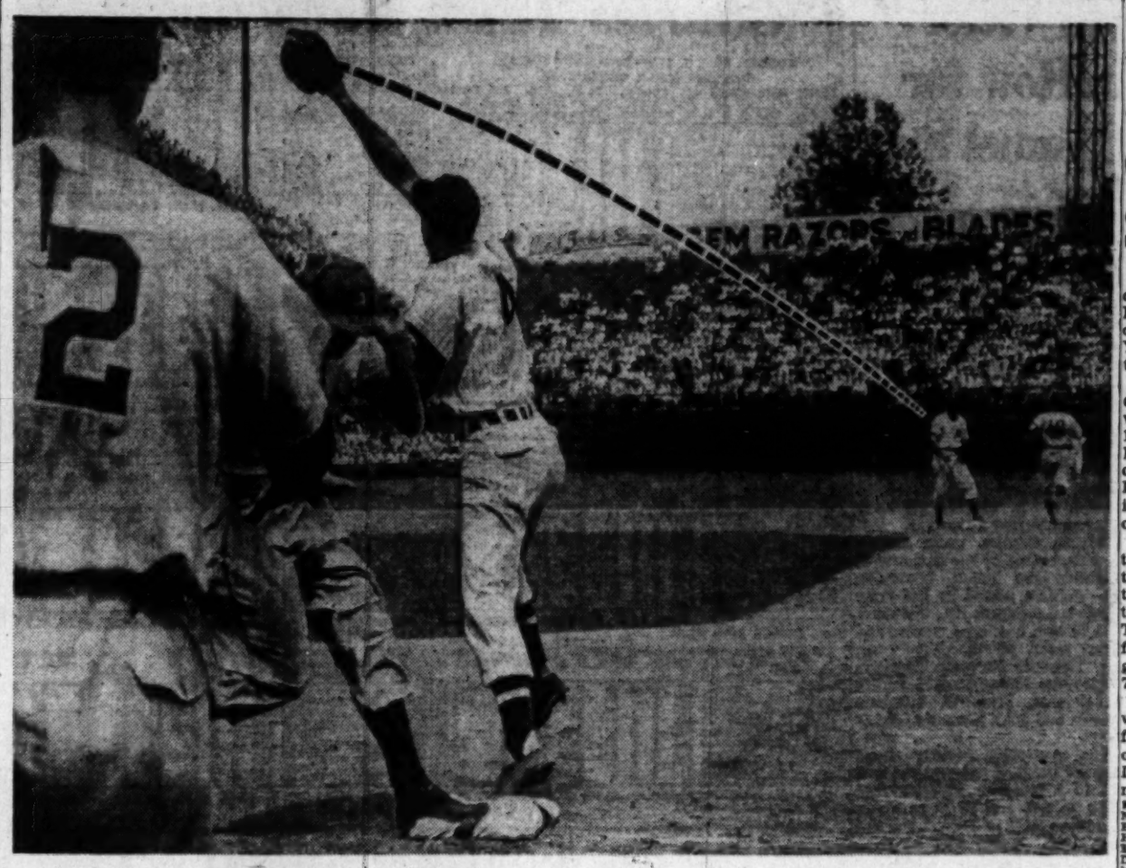
Marchildon, driven out in the sixth, when the Nats used three of their nine hits for two runs, got the decision, his sixth against as many losses.

Only Gil Coan was able to solve the French-Canadian with any degree of success. Coan, snapping out of his slump, belted out a double and two singles, driving in two runs and scoring another.

Don Savage finished up for the Macks, yielding only one hit, a single by Rookie Len Okrie, in the ninth, after relieving Marchildon.

Capitol Heights Wins

Capital Heights swept a twin bill over Oxon Hill, 6-4 and 8-5, yesterday in Prince Georges Boys' Club League competition at Fort Washington.



Feller Beaten As Cleveland, Tigers Divide

Cleveland, July 5 (AP). — Home runs by Eddie Lake and Pat Mullin supplied the Detroit Tigers with a four-run eighth inning today and a 7 to 5 victory over the Cleveland Indians in the second game of a doubleheader before 59,042 fans.

The Indians won the opener, 6 to 3, on the strength of a five-run fourth inning.

Ken Keltner and Joe Gordon homered for the Indians. It was Keltner's eighteenth of the season and Gordon's sixteenth.

Bob Lemon scattered nine Tiger hits to win his twelfth game of the season.

The Indians held a 4-2 edge entering the eighth inning of the nightcap but then came the Detroit uprising. Lake smashed a home run and starter Sam Zoldak was lifted in favor of Bob Feller. Feller then proceeded to walk Vic Wertz and Hoot Evers in succession and Mullin then put the game on ice with a circuit clout into the right field stands.

Eddie Robinson homered to open the Indians' half of the ninth. After Joe Gordon fanned, Ken Keltner drew a walk. Hal Newhouser then came in to relieve starter Freddie Hutchinson and retired the next two batters to end the game.

Suder grounded to Johnny Sullivan who tossed to Kozar, forcing Elmer Valo, but Kozar's throw to Mickey Vernon was high. Manager Joe Kuhel of the Nats protested when Suder was called safe but to no avail. The Mack coach (No. 2) is Skeeter Webb

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers, who dropped three in a row to the Philadelphia Phillies at Ebbets Field, jolted the same Phillies in both halves of a double-header today beating Dutch Leonard, 4-3, in the 10-inning opener and combining heavy hitting with five-hit pitching by Rex Barney to win the nightcap, 10-1.

By winning, the Bums moved into sixth place.

Ray Coleman's Trick Bat Is Spotted Again

By this time Athletics' outfielder Ray Coleman should know he can't pass off a marked bat on the Nats.

He tried it in Philadelphia Tuesday and was caught. In the opener yesterday he attempted to use his favorite rosin-stained bludgeon, but eagled-eyed Joe Kuhel caught him again and Umpire Jim Boyer sent him back to the bench to fetch another bat.

Baseball rules prohibit any foreign substance or markings on a bat higher than 18 inches.

Kuhel thought he detected Yankees Tommy Henrich and Joe DiMaggio using marked bats in the Yankee-Nat series over the weekend, but Boyer, head umpire at that time also, thought differently.

Players stain their bats with rosin or similar substance to remove the slickness from the stick.—SIEGAL.

Detroit Shooter Finishes First In Pistol Event

Defending champion Walter Walsh of Arlington finished third and Roy Marshall of Washington fell to fourth yesterday as John W. Porter of Detroit won the Eastern Pistol championship at Quantico.

Porter's last day score of 842/900 with the .45 caliber pistol enabled him to rally from fourth place to the top spot. He had a three-day total of 2556/2700 with the .22, .38 and .45 calibers. Second place went to Charles Logie of Grand Rapids, Mich., who shot 2545/2700. Walsh, in third place, had 2542/2700.

The top three qualified for the National championships which will be staged by the National Rifle Association late in October. Washington's Marshall led at the two-third mark with 1717, but faded in the .45 caliber competition to fall out of the running.

In the intermediate eight-oared shells, an event of the National division, Old Dominion finished third. Detroit Rowing Club won the race by four lengths in the good time of 6 minutes, 46 and 3/5 seconds. Second was Penn Athletic Club of Philadelphia, leading Old Dominion by a length.

7th Victory In Row for Calumet Star

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Citation and Jockey Eddie Arcaro teamed up again today to capture the $56,100 Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park before 46,490 spectators, largest crowd in the history of the track.

The Calumet Farm's fabulous 3-year-old registered his seventh successive triumph in racing to a two-lengths victory in a punishing ride by Arcaro. The triple crown winner ran the mile and an eighth in 1:49 1-5 to equal the track record which another Calumet flyer, Armed, set in winning the same Stars and Stripes a year ago.

Behind Citation came Eternal Reward, owned by the turf firm of Augustus and Nahm, Louisville, Ky. Pellicle, owned by Hal Price Headley, Lexington, Ky., was third, with Loujac, another Augustus and Nahm racer, fourth. Then came Star Reward, Fervent, Citation's stablemate; Maine Chance Farm's Knockdown, Fred W. Hooper's Colosal and John Marsch's Mighty Story.

The sweltering holiday crowd sent the Calumet entry to the post a 1 to 5 favorite. Citation paid $2.60 to win and $2.20 to place. The place price on Eternal Reward was $3.40. There was no show betting.

The sum of $242,337 was wagered on the race, with $90,466 going on the Calumet entry to win and $62,843 to place. The great 3-year-old son of Bull Lea made his usual spectacular stretch drive to turn back the challenge of the finest field he has been asked to meet in his two years of racing.

Citation and Arcaro didn't keep their backers long in suspense for while Maine Chance Farm's Knockdown, Loujac, and Fred W. Hooper's Colosal were setting the early pace, Citation gradually moved forward and by the time the field had made the far turn, the Calumet star was right with them and went into the lead as they made ready to turn for home.

Winning his nineteenth victory in 21 starts, Citation earned $38,900. This brought his 1948 total to $427,020, thus breaking the one-year money record of $424,195 established by Assault in 1946. Citation's all-time earnings stand at $582,700.

My Request Wins at Aqueduct

New York, July 5 (AP).—Ben Whitaker's My Request won the thirty-first running of the $57,300 Dwyer Stakes before a sweltering holiday crowd of 39,814 persons at Aqueduct today.

The 3-year-old son of Requested, made the favorite, caught King Ranch's pace-setting Better Self just inside the three-sixteenths pole in a great stretch drive to win by four lengths and was timed for the mile and one quarter in 2:02 flat—just 3/5 of a second off the track record.

Better Self saved the place by a half length over A. G. Vanderbilt's Loser Weeper, while W. L. Brann's Escadru was fourth.

Linksmen Hot: 2 Holes-in One, Three Eagles

Marty West, jr., scored an ace at Columbia Country Club on the 194-yard eighth hole. West used a three iron.

At Fairfax, Irving Cohen hit a five iron about 174 yards into the cup on the 17th hole.

Also at Fairfax, Ben Sewell racked up an eagle 2 as he sank a three iron shot on the 337-yard ninth hole. On the next round, Sewell's playing companion, Harry Beattie, nearly duplicated the feat as his seven iron shot stopped near the cup.

Spencer Allen Wins at Laurel on Disqualification

Auburn Volo Breaks Gait At Finish

Marking the first time the top horse has been disqualified, Auburn Volo's number was pulled down and Spencer Allen declared the winner of the second race last night at Laurel Raceway.

Len Turlington drove Auburn Volo to the wire a neck in front of Harry Hubbard's Spencer Allen but his 12-year old gelding broke his trotting gait near the finish line.

Two 10 to 1 shots performed well in the third and fourth races but had to be content with second places. Favored Royal Sue prevailed over Treasure Hanover, first-time starter driven by Pat Hubbard, in the third. And in the fourth, Alan Myer's April Day had to be content with the place shot behind Ed Kelly's Peterkin Spencer, $14.20 winner in the wide-open race.

G. D. Woolen did a little better than run true to form in the fifth. Lem Applegate wheeled the $4.80 choice home in 2:10 1/5 the best time the 8-year-old gelding ever turned in.

Parker Loses Again

Dublin, July 5 (AP).—Frank Parker of Los Angeles, seeded first in the recent Wimbledon tennis championships but upset by Lennart Bergelin of Sweden, was defeated by Eric Sturgess of South Africa, 7—9, 6—3, 6—0 in a club match here today.

U. S. Might Be Well Out Of Berlin, Kayser Says

GWU Dean Feels Swap With Russia For Concessions Could Be Helpful

This suggestion was made yesterday by Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of students at George Washington University, in an address before the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

"It may well be," said Kayser, "that some of the World War II agreements require renegotiation. It might easily be the part of wisdom to consider giving Russia control of Berlin on a sound basis of quid pro quo in exchange for concessions which would be far more advantageous to us in strengthening our position than a tenuous hold on a fourth of a Berlin enclave within a Russian zone."

Dr. Kayser, who declared our national dignity "frequently demands a change in position" and "an ability to differentiate between the apparent and the real," said:

"Berlin, with its Potsdam tradition, reeks with an offensive Prussianism. It would hardly be the center around which we would want to build the new democratic Germany, even if we controlled it, and we do not. Frankfort represents a more wholesome tradition in German culture, a saner tradition in German history.

"Well might we in good Yankee tradition swap a meaningless Berlin for valuable concessions elsewhere. Resourcefulness in American diplomacy is as necessary as armed might in maintaining peace with dignity."

3 Prisoners Turned Rough, Policemen Say

Two Fifth Precinct policemen were assaulted late Sunday night by persons they attempted to arrest on charges of being drunk.

Pvt. Glen L. Griffin reported he was struck by Robert L. Dean and Dean's wife, Mabel, of 5005 O st. se., when he tried to arrest them in a restaurant in the 500 block of 8th st. se.

Dean struck Griffin with his fist and Mrs. Dean hit him over the head with her handbag, the policemen asserted. He said he had to strike Dean with the butt of his revolver to subdue him.

Dean was treated at Gallinger Hospital for scalp lacerations. Both he and his wife were charged with being drunk and disorderly and with assault on a police officer.

Charged with same offenses was Donald D. Simmons, 28, of 324 A st ne., who was arrested by Pvt. Lewis C. Hines in a restaurant in the 300 block of Pennsylvania ave. se.

Youth May Lose Eye After Stunt With Firecracker

Doctors are working to save the farm boy's eye. He was also injured in the face when a firecracker under a tin can exploded Saturday night.

The youth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Legard of Wheatland, was alone at the time on his father's farm. He had placed the cracker under the can and was about 25 feet away when it went off. Flying tin punctured his eye.

Oldest Inhabitants Relive Other D. C. Fourths At Traditional Reunion in Engine House

BUSINESS AS USUAL—Before the Independence Day exercises get under way, a regular business meeting is held in association's headquarters at the old Union Engine House. Presiding are John Clagett Proctor, association president, and Orrin J. Davy, secretary

On July 4, 1870, the Association of the Oldest Inhabitants of the District of Columbia presented a marble slab to the Washington Monument Society.

The stone went inside the Washington Monument. The presentation ceremony took place at noon, before a "highly respectable number of ladies and gentlemen."

This was one of the things the association remembered, officially, yesterday when it met to observe the Nation's birthday again.

At Old Engine House

It was a big day for the 50-odd men and women who turned out at the Old Union Engine House yesterday.

Most of the men came in shirt sleeves or seersucker coats. They had the Police Band to play for them, and a college dean to speak to them.

And each, in these surroundings, could say: "Fond memory brings the light of other days around me."

There was a lot of handshaking and greeting. There were comments: "It's nice to see all the same faces here again"—and "We'll all be here a hundred years hence."

They had some people who wanted to join the association—most of them because their own fathers or grandfathers had belonged. Some of the candidates waited until they passed 50, one of the requirements.

So John Clagett Proctor, association president, directed the members to decide whether they wanted the new members, by the white ball; or would keep them out, with the black ball. All the applicants got in.

There was a to-do, also, about who was on the committee to ring the old fire bell at noon. There was much looking at watches and wondering whether the association clock was on time. And at 12 o'clock promptly, the bell tolled again, as on many historic occasions.

Under the meeting room of the association, where the bell is kept, there also are numerous relics of District history—fire wagons and equipment, firemen's helmets from 'way back.

Charles Lehmann, 522 Jefferson st. nw., who was acting as marshal yesterday, pointed out a marble bust as "the mystery." It is the bust of a woman, but no one knows who she was, why she was memorialized, or what part she played in District history.

They elected Herbert P. Leeman vice president to succeed Monie Sanger, who died last month. President Proctor read an original poem: "If We Could Just Have Been There" on the first Independence Day.

Soterios Nicholson intoned the Declaration of Independence. Mrs. Edward Cox sang "Dear Old Flag" and similar selections. Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, dean of students at George Washington University, spoke. Then everybody got up and sang "Auld Lang Syne," and went home.

Doctor Surprises Prowler

A housebreaker surprised while rifling the home of Dr. Philip Varner 7202 Connecticut ave., last night escaped after throwing a bag of stolen clothing in the physician's face.

The Varners had been viewing the fireworks display on the Washington Monument grounds and returned home about 10 p. m.

While Mrs. Varner hurried to a next door neighbor to call police, Dr. Varner went to the rear of the house hoping to grab the thief as he left.

At this point the intruder, apparently having run from the rear door, leaped out of a hedge and flung the bag at the doctor, staggering him momentarily.

Dr. Varner said the man was white, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, of medium build, hatless and wearing a tan jacket.

In another case Edward S. Barton, 1101 Euclid st. nw., told police someone entered his room yesterday afternoon and made off with a leather billfold containing $300.

No Progress Made in Girl Murder Case

Police Admit Facing Blank Wall 9 Days After Fatal Stabbing In Rock Creek Park

By Jean Reiff
Post Reporter

District police admittedly faced a blank wall yesterday in the slaying of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell.

Nine days had passed since the girl was found dead with her throat slashed in Rock Creek Park. During those nine days, police have questioned many scores in a fruitless search for any kind of a lead.

The murderer left no clews. The murder weapon has not been found. No witnesses have come forward to say they saw the person, who might have killed Carol, around the spot near 17th st. and Colorado ave. nw., where her body was found.

Break Badly Needed

Police are still searching for three young Negro girls, who were seen leaving the Park at 16th st. and Colorado ave. in a hurry about an hour before Carl was found dead. They are also searching for a man, about 35, and a boy, about 15, both of whom were seen with blood-stained shirts near 14th st. and Park rd. nw., last Sunday evening.

The Bardwell murder case, with its complete lack of clews or suspects, illustrates the job police are up against in solving homicides without a promising clew.

Another Murder Unsolved

The combined police forces of Washington and Arlington have been unable to solve another recent Greater Washington murder for want of witnesses and clews.

The unsolved case is the auto-bomb slaying of William J. Denekas, 30, an Arlington neon sign dealer, who was killed July 7 when he stepped on the starter of his car and detonated a bomb, which had apparently been planted there during the night. The blast occurred in front of a house at 5837 N. 21st st., where he had a room.

In the past two years there have been other cases like these. Some have been solved; some have not.

Last March 1, Meyer Meyrevitch, 39, of 435 Ingraham st. nw., was found shot to death in his grocery store at 90 O st. nw. Police had to work without a clew from the start. The case is unsolved.

Three days earlier, within a period of 12 hours, two cab drivers, Howard Jones, 37, of 417 Irving st. nw., and James Hardy, 32, of 647 G st. ne., had been fatally shot in hold-ups in Southeast Washington.

Their slayers, George and Lawrence Garner were arrested several days later, when police tracked down a tip from a citizen, that one of the brothers had been seen with a gun. Both of the Garners have been convicted of the crime.

On September 18, 1947, Mrs. Adele Johnson, 62, was shot to death by a prowler in the basement door of her rooming house at 1728 New Hampshire ave. nw. There were no witnesses or clews. The case is unsolved.

Trio Convicted

The preceding March, Frank Kelly, 56, of 4004 New Hampshire ave. nw., an electrician for the U. S. Engineers, was fatally shot on the street in the 2500 block of 11th st. nw. Three youths, Shirley Harris, 23; Joseph M. Gray, 19, and Herbert H. Hall, 18, have been convicted for the crime.

They were arrested five day's after Kelly's death, when police examined the shoes of a man, picked up for housebreaking, and found the heel prints matched prints found at the scene of the crime. The housebreaker put them on the trail of one of the murderers to whom he had loaned the shoes.

The month before that, Floyd Wilson, 31-year-old father of five children, was arrested two days after Milton E. Lowe, 45, of 1526 Neal st. ne., was shot to death in an attempted hold-up outside a grocery store at 3924 Minnesota ave. ne., where he was a clerk. Wilson was found guilty of the slaying.

A hat he dropped near the scene, and the description furnished police by witnesses to the shooting led to his arest, police said.

In September, 1946, James A. Kemp, 24, a Navy Yard cabinetmaker, was found stabbed to death in the street less than a block from his home at 335 37th pl. se. Again there were no known witnesses to the crime, and the murder weapon was never found. The murder is still unsolved.

The fatal shooting in June, 1946, of Maurice L. Bernstein, 52, during a hold-up in his drugstore at 1786 Florida ave. nw., was solved five days after his death, with the arrest of Jesse James Patton, 21, who police tracked down by searching through "dives" after they found the murder weapon. He implicated Reginald J. Wheeler, 26, who was arrested later in South Carolina. Both were convicted.

The Police Department's record of solved homicide cases actually stands high, despite a number of outstanding unsolved cases. According to reports from the Washington Criminal Justice Association, 106 homicides were reported here in 1946. Of that number, 99 cases or 93 per cent were cleared. In 1947, according to the report, 70 homicides were reported with 68 or 97.1 per cent cleared.

Board, Commissioners?

Battle About School System Steaming Up in Montgomery

Sauter Stanley Hiser Broome
Key Figures in Montgomery County School Controversy

By Roger Farquhar
Post Reporter

Has Montgomery County an extravagant school board which is failing to give the 18,000 students of the richest rural county in the United States an adequate education?

Or are county authorities and business groups too stingy to permit the school system to keep pace with a fast growing population and modern educational trends?

These are questions being tossed around at Rockville as an aftermath of action by the county commissioners in cutting school board requests from $3,429,000 to $2,818,000.

Indignant Parent' Group

Latest development is the announcement of a self-styled "indignant parent group" that it plans to gather 5000 signatures on a petition charging schools have fallen down on the job of teaching children "the essentials of knowledge."

Supporters of the school system are prepared to reply that too much emphasis on the "three R's" went out with the Model T Ford and that today's education makes better educated, more enlightened citizens.

Militantly against the school board and its policies is County Commissioner Wesley I. Sauter. A Bethesda builder, Sauter has issued frequent blasts at the county educators, charging "wasteful and extravagant school construction and "too many frills" in the curriculum.

Sauter is supporting the group of approximately 40 Bethesda area parents who are moving toward a fight with school officials over the quality of education, especially in elementary schools.

Temporary head of the parent group is John H. Hiser, Bethesda theater owner. Another leader is Mrs. Duncan H. Brooks, wife of a photographer. Still another is Robert P. Parke, president of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce and a State Department official.

The parents charge their children are not learning to read and write, that too much emphasis is placed on extra curricular activities and not enough on the fundamentals, and that their youngsters are treated like "guinea pigs, behavioristic, psychiatric, personality or social problems."

School officials have refrained from answering the charges to date, but President H. Stanley Stine, of the county board of education has promised the matter will be considered at the next school board meeting July 13.

Membership Question

Another issue in the school situation is the question of whether county school board members should be elected or appointed as at present.

Commissioner Sauter, a Republican, has called for an elected school board instead of one which he claims is "solidly Democratic" because the appointing authority is the Democratic governor. Siding with him is the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations.

The indignant parent group, which now occupies the limelight, says it is not concerned with this issue. Nor is it concerned with the budget dispute, or recent charges that "Communist propaganda" is contained in some textbooks. "We are only fighting for more attention to the fundamentals of education," they say.

Dr. Edwin W. Broome, for 30 years the county school superintendent, has not entered the dispute declaring he would not comment on the parent charges until the petition is presented.

What may be the result of the furor? A hint was contained in a recent statement by President Stine of the school board; said he:

"If the complaints have the backing of a majority of our citizens, we will change the school system to conform to the wishes of the people.

"However, we have received many more commendations upon our school system than we have complaints of this nature."

Capt. Milliken's View

Wayward Girl Seen as Seeking Affection Missing at Home

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Young girls don't start down the primrose path to be promiscuous—usually they are just looking for affection lacking in their home life.

Milliken

This is the belief of Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, head of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, who believes that affection is the most important thing that parents can give to their children.

Captain Milliken is concerned at the mounting number of neglected child cases which her department has been handling since the war's end The increase follows a similar trend after World War I, and is by no means confined to Washington.

Neglect to Delinquency

"All over the country," she said, "we are finding an uncomfortably large number of families that aren't families. These families produce neglected children. And you can't neglect children at one time and not expect delinquency later."

The girls who become promiscuous as a result of such family difficulties, Captain Milliken said, accept the fact of promiscuity as part of the price they must pay for getting affection.

Captain Milliken can cite endless cases to show how this has worked out in her nearly 30 years' police work.

One such case involved a girl adopted by a well-to-do family. The couple had been married for 10 years and had no children. But the mother was a very restrained, systematic person constitutionally unable to demonstrate affection. And the father was jolly, friendly, demonstrative. The child early realized that if she got her parents at loggerheads, she could get her own way.

Case of One Girl

As the girl grew up, the mother, who had expected her to be intellectually brillant, became dissatisfied with her school work. She didn't like the way the girl did things in a hit-or-miss fashion. When the girl tried to explain that some academic things were too hard for her, the mother said the father was encouraging the girl not to study.

The girl was sent to a rigid, conservative school, and ran away. A public school was tried without success. She started staying out late at night, with youngsters her own age. Her mother objected She failed at mid-semester, and was taken out of school. The parents sought psychiatrie aid, but were not frank with the doctor. Each blamed the other. They did not tell the psychiatrist the girl was adopted. And the girl did not at this point know she was an adopted child.

Eventually, the child stayed out all night, and she was reported missing. She returned the next afternoon. Police investigating the case found that she had been hanging around a drug store, had been brought home one night by a cab driver who had a stand nearby, and then had started riding with the cab driver.

He had introduced her to people connected with night clubs, among them one man who had taken her to movies, dancing, and to late suppers and then had taken her to his apartment.

The man subsequently made dates with her for prostitution with other older men.

The girl explained that she had not liked the people she had been seeing, but that she had nothing else to do. With psychiatric aid for the whole family, the women's bureau was able to straighten out the situation by explaining their fundamental error to the parents. The girl was placed in a different type of school and there has been no further trouble.

Unwanted Child

In another case, a woman had a child she had unconsciously never wanted, and after her husband died, the child felt so rejected that she shop-lifted and stayed out late just to create problems that would make her mother pay attention to her.

In slum area cases, Captain Milliken said, girls run away from home because they cannot bear their family situations. Often the girl accepts the adult behavior to which she has been accustomed as normal. And if prostitution has been the adult behavior, the girl will feel no compunctions about it as a means of earning a living.

Capital Milliken pointed out that the primrose path is not a "women only" proposition. She said there is just as much promiscuity among boys, "but nobody seems to care about the boys."

She said that this lack of attention to a problem so acute is doing much to defeat marriages. A youth who has had an abnormal experience may find it very difficult to adjust himself to married life.

But the emphasis, Captain Milliken said, seems to remain on girls, since they may have babies, which become community problems.

PEPCO Rate Increase Hearing Set For Today

A hearing on a Potomac Electric Power Co. petition for an increase in electricity rates is scheduled for 10 a. m. today in the board room of the District Building.

It is estimated that the rate proposal would add 10 cents a week to the average home electric bill. After petitioning for this increase, Pepco later indicated, however, that even if it is effected, the company may have to seek an additional rate boost because of insufficient earning power to attract investors.

'Dud' Firecracker Is Friend in Court

Prosecution of the only fireworks case in Municipal Court yesterday proved a dud because the firecracker Charles H. Murphy, 19, was charged with exploding turned out to be a fizzler.

Murphy, who resides at 3550 Rock Creek Church rd. nw., pleaded guilty to the charge. But police who arrested Murphy Sunday at 7th and P sts. nw., testified that the only firecracker he lit in their presence never did explode, although the fuse did fizzle.

Judge John P. McMahon then read the charge which says that the defendant "did explode or cause to be exploded" a firecracker. On that ground, Judge McMahon found Murphy innocent.

Mrs. Bridges Is Feted At Asutralian Embassy

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE AUSTRALIAN EMBASSY is the scene of much coming and going these days. A farewell tea was given yesterday in honor of Mrs. J. G. Bridges, wife of the retiring press attache, with Miss Dorothy Stirling, sister of the former Minister of Australia acting as hostess in the absence of Mrs. Makin, wife of the Ambassador.

Mr. Stirling has been appointed High Commissioner to South Africa, and will leave from Australia for his new diplomatic post within a few days. Probably in September he will take a long holiday and come to Washington for a farewell visit with his friends here.

The Ambassador and Mrs. Makin are in California, where Mrs. Makin arrived from a visit in Australia a short while back, and they will return to Washington on the 17th or 18th of the month.

Wives of embassy staff members were entertained in the drawing room of the embassy yesterday between the hours of 4 and 6 o'clock. Mrs. Bridges, the honor guest, has just returned from a visit with her family in Sweden, and is packing her bags again for London, where Mr. Bridges will be attached to the office of the High Commissioner.

Tells of Sweden

There is great activity there, she said, with wonderful iron ore being constantly shipped to Narbik and thence to ports all over the world. The schools and social welfare work in that area of the far north she reported as excellent.

At the stroke of midnight on January 1, 1948, the region where Mrs. Bridges grew up was incorporated into the town of Kiruma and called the "largest town in the world." Although it boasts only 18,000 inhabitants, it is 18 times larger in area than New York City.

Mrs. Bridges said she had not been in Sweden for many years, and that she was delighted to note many improvements. Everything seemed very clean and new, and everyone seemed to have a stainless steel kitchen. Mrs. Bridges has lived a number of years in London and will feel very much at home at her husban's new post.

Miss Stirling looked charming yesterday in a pink cotton frock with eyelet embroidered neckline. Her hat was a wide-brimmed natural straw, trimmed with blue and deep rose colored flowers.

Other guests at the tea included Mme. Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister; Mrs. J. U. Garside, wife of the Commercial Counselor of Australia, who is leaving soon for Nantucket; Mrs. S. H. K. Spurgeon, wife of the Naval Attache at the embassy; Mrs. R. C. Cheadle and Mrs. Neville A. Whiffen, wives of attaches, and Mrs. Roland Wilson, wife of the Economic Counselor.

Arthur Condons Give Picnic, Swimming Party

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR CONDON invited a number of their Washington friends to a picnic and swimming party yesterday at their country place, London-Town Terrace, near Annapolis. The name of the estate came from an old town on South River, where the Condon residence now stands.

Yesterday's fete celebrated the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Condon. Among those who motored from Washington were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Childress, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mrs. J. J. Mack and Elmer Pratt.

Also, Commodore and Mrs. Richard Glass, Comdr. and Mrs. Edward Roosevelt Halloran, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Scrivener, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Seal, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. John Begg. A number of friends from Anne Arundel County were also on hand for the occasion.

Cold Pack Method Is Judged Best for Canning Tomatoes

The cold pack method of preparing tomatoes for home canning has won a "tasters' victory" over the hot pack method—a matter of interest to homemakers who will be canning millions of jars of tomatoes this summer.

In tasting sessions, at the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, experienced food judges observed, smelled, and tasted tomatoes especially canned and stored for tests. Tomatoes that were packed raw in jars and then processed in a water bath canner were rated higher on every count—flavor, color, texture, odor, and general acceptability—than tomatoes that were heated before they were put into jars and processed.

One advantage remains to the hot pack method, say the Bureau's home canning specialists. More tomatoes can be put into each jar, which is a point to consider if jars or storage space are limited.

Tomatoes that have been properly home-canned may be expected to keep in ordinary household storage for as long as a year with no loss in flavor, the bureau's work also shows. Actually, judges' scores were higher in most cases for experimentally home-canned tomatoes that had been stored a year than for similar packs stored only two months.

How to Remove Tar From Suit

Can you tell me how to remove road tar from a cotton corde suit? W. S.

It is usually very difficult to remove such stains, but start by softening the spot with vaseline or lard. Spread the fat on and rub it well into the stain. Rub gently between the fingers and allow to stand until the fat has completely penetrated the tar. When completely softened, sponge the stain with carbon tetrachloride or another grease solvent. If possible, place an absorbent pad under the stain, moving it as it becomes soiled. Frequently change the area of cloth used for the sponging, so that a fresh area is constantly in contact with the stain. If all the stain is not removed by first treatment, repeat.

My summer curtains are faded and streaked. They are a pale green rayon. I want to tint or dye them, whichever is better. Is it necessary to bleach them first or will they take a dye evenly as they are? E. C.N.

If you wish to tint or dye the curtains a light green, you will achieve a more even color by first removing all of the color with a dye color remover sold where dyes are sold. When all color is removed, whether you dye or tint will depend upon your choice. With tinting, you simply dip the washed, rinsed curtains in a dye bath. Agitate the curtains constantly until the color you wish is obtained. Remember colors are always darker when wet. Remove from dye bath and rinse until no more color can be rinsed from them.

To dye, the curtains must be boiled in the dye bath. Of course, the color when dyed is more permanent than when tinted. However, since you want only a pale color, and since even the fastest colors fade when exposed to sun at a window, these curtains can probably be kept looking nicest with the least effort by dipping them in a tint each time they are washed. If this is done frequently enough—that is before pronounced streaks are allowed to appear—it should not be necessary to completely remove the color each time.

Could you possibly tell me where I could locate some Noritake china cups? I bought a service of 12 before the war but have broken all my cups. It was supposed to be open stock but was hand-painted in Japan, so I just haven't been able to locate any since the war. E. E.

Noritake china is being imported from Japan again under various brand names but very little is available except in sets and in new patterns, according to buyers for local china stores and departments. In fact, there is apparently no open stock china of this type on sale here, and buyers do not anticipate being able to get it anytime soon.

Could the adhesive tape applied by iron to mend sheets, etc., be successfully used in place of whip-stitching to turn up the edge of sturdy cotton dresses that have been let down to the very bottom? N. G.

The tape would be difficult to apply unless the skirts of the dresses are absolutely straight. When applied, the entire width of the straight tape would be attached to the skirt and if there was any flare at all in the dress, this would cause fullness that might be difficult to pleat under at the top of the tape. Just one more thought! If the tape is stiff after being applied, this might prevent the dress from hanging gracefully.

Foreign Policy Is Denounced At BPW Session

Liso Sergio of New York City public affairs editor of "Tomorrow" and radio commentator, charged last night, that the United States has bypassed fairness in its foreign policy recently.

She made her assertion in a speech last night before some 3000 delegates attending the biennial convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, now in session in Fort Worth, Texas.

The speaker said that another principle we have honored more often in the breach than in the observance in recent times is loyalty to pledges. "The discrepancy between our official actions and our individual behavior here, too, is striking," she said. "Steadfastness may not be a moral principle, but it certainly is a fundamental virtue in leadership. There is no more shocking example of our lack of it than in our policy toward Palestine. Yet, if steadfastness were not a deeply rooted trait of the American character, there would have been no United States of America."

Miss Liso called upon the people of the country not only to devote the utmost military resources, goods and money for world peace, but to reevaluate the role which moral principles must play in our policy.

To make this country's leadership effective in world affairs the following needs to be done, according to Miss Liso.

(1) Acquire all source and first hand knowledge possible on issues now awaiting settlement. (2) Make domestic issues second to international ones; (3) promotion of grass roots interest in understanding the public affairs by the women; (4) promote a greater contact and understanding between the elected representatives of the people, who shape our policies and implement them, and their constituents.

At the morning session Miss Sally Butler called upon federation members to fullfill their obligations as citizens by voting in the coming election.

HOMEMADE MACAROONS: Typical of a galaxy of new, time-saving items on the market is macaroon mix. With them you can turn out a batch of macaroons in double-quick time—fresh, delicious macaroons that are bound to be the hit of any party

It's New!

"Less work" is a wonderful watchword for these hot summer days, and that's just what's promised the homemaker by an array of new products that recently hit the market.

One of them is a macaroon mix, which makes it possible for you to bake delicious homemade macaroons in a jiffy. All you do is put the contents of a can of mix in a bowl, add an egg white, and blend thoroughly. Marble-sized pieces of this mixture are dropped on cookie paper sheets, baked 20 minutes in a slow oven, and cooled to crunchiness.

THEN THERE'S THAT NEW THREE-WAY CAKE MIX, the one that can be turned into layer cake with a minimum of effort. Enough for two layers comes in a box. You can use the mix "as is" with milk to make a fluffy whitecake. You can add an egg and grated orange rind and turn out a gold cake. Or you can stir in a bit of cocoa and soda for a chocolate fudge cake.

NOT REALLY NEW, BUT BACK ON THE MARKET after an absense of several years is a famous brand of beans baked with molasses and pork. These are select navy beans, baked in a slow, dry oven, and steeped in the traditional New England sauce of rich molasses and choice spices. What a lot of hot work they save by coming ready for serving at picnic or informal supper!

TIME-SAVER IN THE KITCHEN—and something you'll be proud to own, too—is a good-looking new budget and recipe file now on sale here. It's a tufted leatherette affair that looks like a handsome book and has ample space for recipes, homemaking tips, and even insurance, rent, and bank statements. It makes an ideal gift for a friend who believes in well-organized household management.

IF YOU FIND IT'S NOT THE HEAT but the humidity that gives you the most housekeeping trouble, then listen to the story of a new drying-out device. You can save time that might be wasted fighting mold and mildew if you place one of these in a damp closet or storage space. It's a chemical-filled can that absorbs the moisture from the atmosphere, so that it can't harm your shoes and dresses.

HERE'S A CLEVER NEW STATIONERY item that will give you added encouragement in keeping up your correspondence these hot days. It's designed around your own signature, reproduced at the top of sheets of quality writing paper. The new paper, on sale at local department stores and a book shop, makes a novel surprise gift, too. All that is needed is the signature you want reproduced. You can snip it from a friend's letter and surprise him with this unusual paper on birthday or anniversary.

Steps in Moth Prevention

All trunks, boxes and chests used to hold winter wraps and draperies should be lined with tar-treated paper.

Nothing should be stored away unless it is absolutely clean and free from spots and soil. No amount of camphor can keep moths out of soiled clothes.

The tar bags that can be bought so reasonably now are splendid for particular clothing. There is a hanger inside to hold the garment and keep it in shape while being stored.

Another good solution is to buy one of the tar cabinets which store about 10 or 12 garments. After the garment is cleaned, leave it in the bag in which it came from the cleaner and place inside the cabinet.

Backyard Games Add Fun to Summer's Routine

You can be a happier person if you learn to play your worries away, say the editors of Better Homes and Gardens magazine. Here are some games you can play on your own lawn with your family and friends:

Tonight, after eating, challenge a partner to a game of horseshoes. Pitch the first shoe, and you'll know why the game was grandpa's favorite. And why each generation takes to it from the first toss.

For a spare half hour try clock golf. Sink a cup somewhere off-center within a circle of numbers. Then, try sinking a putt from each hour numeral. You'll like putting on your own green when you have a few minutes, or when you find it hard to relax. Troubles slip away when you're intent on play.

For an afternoon in the sun, try peteca. It's an age-old Brazilian sport. You'll like it because you need no net or rackets, and it's fun in any size area. You bat the leather bird with your hand. Lay out the boundaries with a few pinches of lime that will wash away with rain. Make courts big or small, depending on how energetic you feel.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Weighing Lecomte du Nouy's Views on Child Rearing Against Those of Freud, Jung, Adler And Horney, Woman Thinks He Lacks Knowledge

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have always thought you were a wonderful columnist, because your interpretations go down to unconscious sources.

Then I read your article of May 26, addressed to the baffled mother of a very spoiled 4-year-old, who is savagely rough with his younger brothers and especially vicious toward the 3-year-old.

It seemed to me you very astutely put your finger on the crux of the problem in citing the mother's indulgent pride in her first born's precociousness, which leads to an unconscious favoritism; and I also agree that her attempts to discipline him have been "fitful and chickenhearted."

But of all things, to recommend Lecomte du Nouy's treatise on "Education and Instruction" in his book "Human Destiny" (Longmans, Green & Co.), as a source of guidance in correcting her mistakes!

If du Nouy is right in those pages you mention, then Freud, Jung, Adler and Horney are all wrong, because his rules for infant and child training all conspire to completely repress the child's individuality by the age of 3 . . .

His Theories Are Repressive

IT SEEMS safe to say that du Nouy has never openmindedly observed in a good nursery school and never read anything on child psychology by such writers as Madeleine Dixon, Ruth Wendell Washburn, Anna Freud or Lucy Sprague Mitchell to mention a few of my favorites.

Young children have a sense of wonder that can grow into communion with God himself, if they aren't constantly thwarted by adult bumbling. The child has an eagerness to learn-by-doing that can grow into happiness in work and into skillful helpfulness, if his mentors take time to guide and encourage him.

I am not a mother; but I am an aunt, and the sons my brother and his wife reared are the sort of men who give you faith in the future. My sister-in-law was consistently firm in the enforcement of a few simple rules and the upholding of certain basic principles. But a thousand times a day, she requested or suggested or said nothing, and my brother's sense of humor and proportion lightened his discipline. E. D.

Du Nouy's Views Are Pretty Tough

DEAR E. D.: I agree with you that du Nouy's uncompromising advocacy of controlled behavior, as a first premise of moral nurture, does seem suddenly rough and tough as compared to the very tender atmosphere of specialist thought that has begun to solidify about all considerations of constructive child development.

Also I agree that he writes as one who never communed with Freud, Jung, Adler et al; but I think his views are bracing and valuable, nevertheless, and ought to remove the beam from the eye of our correspondent of May 26, who lamely refers to books on child psychology as her authority for dealing diffidently with her son's wilfulness instead of cracking down on him.

Advises Simple, Absolute Rules

DU NOUY says, "The reaction of the young child to its limited universe can only be instinctive, animal-like; it is, therefore, regressive from the standpoint of evolution . . . The task of parents, or those who assume the responsibility of the elementary formation of the child, is limited at first to the application of a small number of absolute and very simple rules . . . afterwards, he (the child) must be taught to control himself . . ."

Isn't that what the mother needs to know?

Incidentally, for all your quarrel with du Nouy, you stress your sister-in-law's "consistently firm enforcement of a few simple rules," and her "upholding of certain basic principles," as the substance of her success in rearing fine sons—which is certainly the essence of the du Nouy treatise, it seems to me. M. H.

Reduce for Good Health; Overweight Shortens Life

By Ida Jean Kain

Overweight is not much of a problem in old age, folks, simply because very fat people don't live to enjoy old age. I'm not trying to scare you to death. . . . I'd like to jolt you into taking off some of those excess pounds so you can live longer.

I go on about streamlines and svelte silhouettes . . . but it's not because excess pounds crowd you into a size 20 when by rights you should be able to slip into a size 16, that matters. It's just that you won't be wearing a size 20 nearly as long as you could wear a size 16!

Add 25 extra pounds, here and there, and you take a dress two sizes larger. Well, if you're close to 45 or past, the additional pounds that go into those two sizes can cut your life expectancy by a fourth! Think that over the next time you shop for a bigger size.

Why is fat such a killer? Every excess pound puts a burden on the vital organs . . . the heart, the pancreas, the gall bladder and the kidneys.

You may take it philosophically and think a short life and a merry one, but that doesn't necessarily follow either. There is nothing very merry about high blood pressure, for example. Yet statistics show that high blood pressure is 2½ times as prevalent among overweights as among normal weights. And bringing weight to normal is the most effective means of reducing high blood pressure.

Overweight shortens life by adding burdens to the heart. In England the incidence of heart disease has lessened considerably. That's because the national weight has been lowered by strict food rationing.

Dr. H. L. Newburgh of the University of Michigan, famous for his obesity studies, declares that 50 pounds of excess weight on a person of 50 years of age brings him to the same point in the race against death as a person afflicted with valvular heart disease!

And with 50 or even 100 pounds of excess weight, the cause is seldom glandular. In all but 5 per cent of the cases, overweight is due to nothing more mysterious than overeating. Fat piles on as a direct result of taking in more energy in the form of food than can be used up in the course of the day's activity. That is, more food than is required to cover the energy used by the body cells to keep the body running, and to cover muscular activity. Any excess is stored, as body fat, and remains until less food is taken than the body uses. Then the stored fat is called on and converted into energy. It's called dieting.

Marine Band To Celebrate Birthday

"The President's Own" band—officially founded in 1798 by act of the Congress, and now probably the Nation's oldest military band—will celebrate its 150th anniversary Saturday.

It's the Marine Corps Band, nicknamed "The President's Own" because Thomas Jefferson took a special liking to it while President from 1801 to 1809.

It will observe its anniversary with a pageant at 8:30 p. m. at the Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument grounds, when scenes from its long history will be depicted in tableau, with musical and narrative accompaniment.

The band actually traces its beginnings back to 1775 when a fife and drum corps, its bass drum blazoned with the slogan "Don't Tread on Me," helped recruit Marines for Revolutionary War duty.

But officially the band was born in 1798 when an act of the Continental Congress authorized 32 fifers and drummers as a part of the new Marine Corps.

Recruited in Philadelphia, then the new Nation's governmental headquarters, the band moved to Washington's muddy flats when the Capital was transferred here in 1800, and has stayed here since.

It gave Washington its first open-air convert in August, 1800, giving birth to what is now a regular custom here from the first week in June through the last week in August each year.

In 1801 in the half-finished and drafty White House, the band made its bow to high society at a New Year's reception given by President John Adams. It has played at every White House New Year's reception since.

The 85 musicians who make up the band today practice three hours a day, average five concerts a week including the free outdoor concerts given Monday nights at the Marine Barracks at 8th and I sts. se., and on Wednesdays at the Capitol's East Plaza.

The Marine Band is now the official indoor band at the White House and takes turns with the Navy, Army and Air Force bands at outdoor welcoming ceremonies for governmental guests.

Maj. William F. Santelmann, 2907 N. Edison st., Arlington, has been the band's leader since 1940 and directed the band during its most "exciting" duty of recent years when it gave a command performance for the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill in May, 1943.

The concert was outdoors and the weather uncooperative, the major recalls. "It rained and poured, but the two sat there and sang and whistled and clapped their hands for 20 minutes in the pouring rain. It raised the devil with the harp, though," he adds.

President Truman, whose fondness for waltzes is well known, is one of the band's favorite presidential listeners and "an awfully nice person to play for," says Santelmann.

"Roses from the South," by Johann Strauss, is one of the President's pet tunes, he says.

New Building For June at Record High

The Commerce Department last night estimated new construction in June at $1,605,000,000, the highest dollar value for any month on record.

The total, measuring construction work actually done and excluding contracts for later performance, was an increase of 11 per cent over May or slightly more than the normal rise between those months.

It was a full 38 per cent higher than in June or last year and 100 million dollars above the previous record levels attained last October and in July, 1942.

The value of all private construction in June was $1,218,000,000, a 10 per cent gain over May. Housing accounted for more than half of the total.

Private housing construction alone came to 625 million dollars, a 9 per cent gain over May and a 54 per cent rise over June last year. The house construction total for the first six months of 1948 was $3,100,000,000, a 60 per cent increase over the same period of 1947.

Other types of privately financed work which gained in June 1948, as compared to June 1947, included: school buildings, 50 per cent; stores, restaurants and garages 82 per cent, and religious structures 138 per cent.

Industrial building was the only class of privately financed construction to decline. Totaling 110 million dollars in June, it was down 2 per cent from May and 21 per cent from June of last year. For the first six months of 1948, it was off 19 per cent from last year.

Public construction in June was valued at 387 million dollars, up 14 per cent from May and 40 per cent from June last year. Among the marked increases over last year were: educational buildings 79 per cent, hospitals and institutional buildings 171 per cent.

Australia to Begin Atomic Experiments

San Francisco, July 5 (U.P.).—The Australian government is considering installing an atom-smashing cyclotron at Melbourne University "as part of its plans for defense," Radio Australia said today.

The broadcast, heard by United Press in San Francisco, said Australia had set aside $134,000,000 from its defense budget for scientific research, including atomic experiments, rocket research and "top secret" activities.

One on the Aisle—

A Schoolmarm Carries a Torch

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: You can't say no to a schoolteacher . . . Irma Gordon, who teaches first grade at the Henry D. Cooke School, is the lady in question . . . For some years Miss Gordon and the Brothers Hohein, Charles and George, have been running the Cross Roads Theater, that modest summer theatrical venture over the Potomac in Virginia . . . This year the masculine members of the trio decided that their own business interests were enough hot weather duties for them and that they weren't interested in continuing into the twelfth year of the project . . . But Miss Gordon decided to stick it out and, once again, Wednesday through Saturday nights light comedies are holding forth on the farm of Mrs. Della Gaines, at Bailey's Cross Roads . . . "I teach for a living and the theater is my hobby," says Miss Gordon, after whose family Gordonsville is named . . . "We don't presume to be professionals, though some of our people have gone on to earning their living in the theater," states Miss G. "We do try, though, to offer light entertainment for our friends who keep coming back to see us every summer." . . . Next play on the Cross Roads schedule opens Wednesday night, "The Bees and the Flowers," which was the basis for Jeanette MacDonald's recent picture, "Three Daring Daughters." . . . The Cross Roaders don't have a downtown ticket office; reservations are made by calling Woodley 5303; you can get a bus marked Baileys Cross Roads at 12th and Pennsylvania avenue . . . So if ever two male producers get linked up with a lady school teacher whose hobby is theater, don't think she won't carry on by her lonesome . . . This one wouldn't take no for an answer.

NOBLE SISSLE in town for a look in on Griffith Stadium, where the second annual music festival of the National Negro Opera Co. will hold forth the night of Saturday, August 7 . . . Noble talks fondly of reviving "Shuffle Along" in New York this fall and it sounds like a swell idea . . . This political comedy came out in 1921 and the other day Bandmaster Sissle was recollecting that only a friend's loan of $100 took the cast safely out of the Belasco and on to a fantastic New York success . . . Sissle's hoping that Pearl Bailey, now at the London Palladium with Duke Ellington and the Nicholas Brothers, will be able to make good her promise to star in it . . . With a projected October opening, this would come right on the nose for the election-heated Indian summer.

MARJORIE LOW, a Washington girl at Bryn Mawr, is about to have the satisfaction of seeing one of her scripts become a play. . . . This is "A Family Story," which the Bryn Mawr College Summer Theater will be playing this week up Pennsylvaia way. . . . "It's a play-poem," says Miss Low, "frankly experimental in style and not the sort likely to find a home in the commercial theater." . . . For all her writing, though, Marjorie still would prefer acting, of which she's done more than a mite at Bryn Mawr.

SID ZINS, drum beater in these parts for Columbia Pictures, is rejoicing over two things. . . . That Red Skelton's picture for his studio, "Fuller Brush Man," is topping the month's box-office ratings across the country and holding up in its third downtown week (the Metropolitan). . . . And, much more important, that blonde, striking Eleanor Ewing finally has said yes. . . . Miss Ewing from majoring in dramatics at Stephens College to United Air Lines. . . . Sid, whose New York days included a stint as assistant stage manager of the Radio City Music Hall, has been having to deny for quite a spell that he was considering renouncing his bachelor independence. . . . But now it's all set and they'll become Mr. and Mrs. on Saturday.

SALLY CHAPMAN of Arlington, is the winner of the Keith-WINX contest for "The Best Song of Our Life." . . . If you're uncertain what the "Best Song" is, know that the picture that started all this is "The Best Years of Our Lives," wherein, on the Keith screen, Hoagy Carmichael holds forth at his piano . . . "Star Dust Road" also brought prizes to Pvt. Roland Woodson, at Fort Mead; Sally Rich of Takoma Park; Marianna Ring, Nancey Groff, Dolorest Tuatt and Hope Harrin . . . No, we don't know the title of the Fox Movietone News theme, either, so save yourself a phone call!

TONIGHT: Olney brings forth an intimate revue, a type of fun dear to this department and one which hasn't graced our stages in too long . . . "Hand in Hand" has book and lyrics by Leonard Gershe, who did the same for a London hit, "Tuppence Coloured," for which Richard Addinsell wrote the chunes . . . Star of it al lis Lenore Lonergan, who was so poisonously wonderful as Fuffy in "Junior Miss." . . . But Lenore is now a beautiful young lady and her Fuffy-fans are, alas, that much older . . . Anyway, see you at Olney's revue.

2 Questioned In Murder of Seattle Girl

Seattle, June 5 (U.P.).—Two men were held for questioning today in the death of a 9-year-old girl who was brutally murdered as she played hide and seek in a densely wooded suburban park here yesterday.

Of 35 persons picked up for questioning in Carkeek Park, a 26-year-old sailor and a 40-year-old warehouseman were taken into custody for further questioning.

The body of Ellen Jane Fulwiler, her face cut and bruised as if from a beating, was found partly covered by ferns and debris in a heavily wooded section of the park a few hundred feet from the picnic grounds.

Coroner John P. Brill, jr., said death was caused by suffocation. He said the child had not been criminally attacked.

The little girl was playing hide and seek with her sister, Carolyn, 5, and a friend, Carolyn Butler, 12. She darted down a bridle path and hid behind a stump. An hour later the child's body was found face down near a bridle path only 600 feet from the family picnic table.

Senator Green Heads Society of Cincinatti

Newport, R. I., July 5 (AP).—U. S. Senator Theodore Francis Green (D., R. I.) was reelected president of the Society of the Cincinnati at the annual meeting here today. Others elected include John Nicholas Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Air, who was reelected vice president.

SHE WENT NATIVE YESTERDAY: June Whiteman of Arlington, set off this giant firecracker as part of her holiday Fourth. Soon June hopes to set off another firecracker. She's a torch singer with ambitions to appear in Gene Ford's coming all Washington area revue at the Capitol, "Going Native"

Reds Beaten in Finland

Helsinki, Finland, July 5 (U.P.).—The humiliating defeat of the Communists in the parliamentary election was emphasized today as counting of votes neared completion.

Hella Wuolijoki, Communist director of the Finnish broadcasting service, was one of the more prominent leftists who lost his seat.

Standings at 5 p. m. in members elected to the new Parliament, as compared to those in the old Parliament, were:

	New	Old
Popular Democrats (Communists)	36	51
Agrarians	56	48
Social Democrats	55	48
Conservatives	34	29
Swedish Party	14	14
Liberals	5	9
Swedish Liberals	0	1
Total	200	200

Two members of the government lost their seats, Minister of Justice Eino Pekkala, a Social Democrat, and Lauri Kaijalainen, Minister of Communications, an Agrarian.

Conservative Leader Arvo Salminen also lost his seat.

[The fear that the setback might have serious repercussions appears to be subsiding. Communist leaders were understood to have decided to avoid any disturbing action, the N. Y. Herald Tribune said.]

Rebels Halt Greek Attack

Athens, July 5 (AP).—Greek army troops tried fou rtimes to storm the important Kleptis Heights in rugged northern Greece today, but were turned back by savage rebel resistance, the general staff reported.

The Kleptis Heights form part of the major defense lines of Communist chieftain Markos Vafiades. Their fall would give the army a corridor into a vital rebel flank.

Some of the Nationalist attacks got as close as a few hundred yards from the summit, but dogged rebel resistance sent them down again, the army said.

Far south of the main battle area, guerillas and army troops fought viciously, reports said. Nationalists and rebels met near Patrai, Greece's third largest city, in the Peloponnesus. Guerilla units were reported to have destroyed Patrai's main power plant. Government infantry and air reinforcements were sent to the area.

Anti-Truman Cohorts Puzzle Negro Association

New York, July 5 (U.P.).—The National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People said today it was "puzzled" by an apparent coalition between anti-Truman Democratic leaders and "bitter opponents of civil rights."

The association sent telegrams of "appreciation" for the stand taken on civil rights by James Roosevelt, Mayor William O'Dwyer of New York, Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, Jacob M. Avery, Democratic leader of Chicago, and Chester Bowles.

"However," the association told these men in their telegrams, "(Negro Americans) and other Americans are puzzled by your apparent coalition with such bitter opponents of civil rights as Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.) and Governors J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, Ben T. Laney of Arkansas and William M. Tuck of Virginia."

Watch Your Temper! Sun Spots Near Peak

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—Dr. Roy K. Marshall, director of the Fels Planetarium, said today ultra-violet rays from the sun spots are near their maximum numbers and intensity for the first time in 11 years.

Dr. Marshall said these beams of invisible energy coming from the sun 93 million miles away easily affect tempers of people.

Emotions too are governed by the various glands of the body which readily may be disturbed by the sun's ultra-violet rays, he asserted.

Dr. Marshall said the last time the sun spots reached their maximuni frequency was in 1937 when Adolf Hitler started on his destructive plan of world conquest.

Two Parties to Hold Okla. Primaries Today

Oklahoma City, July 5 (AP).—Oklahomans will go to the polls tomorrow to nominate Democratic and Republican candidates for the United States Senate, eight Congressional posts and a few State offices. It is an off-year election and the governorship is not at stake.

Interest has been light and the total vote may not exceed 350,000 or 400,000.

Maryland GI Drowns

Plattsmouth, Nebr., July 5 (AP).—Corpl. Elwood Wiley, 19, son of Mrs. Lulu Wiley of Grantsville, Md., was drowned yesterday in a sandpit north of here at Fort Crook, where Wiley was stationed. It was said he went wading and stepped into a hole.

Penitentiary Paper

Moundsville, W. Va., July 5 (AP). Inmates of the West Virginia Penitentiary will start publishing their own newspaper Saturday, Warden Drel J. Skeen announced today.

Polio Pace Unslackened

Raleigh, N. C., July 5 (AP).—North Carolina's third worst infantile paralysis outbreak shows no signs of slackening, with 353 cases reported to the State Board of Health up to the time of the Saturday holiday shutdown.

Eastern Daylight Saving Time on Wednesday, July 14, 1948, by the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission at its office, 4017 Hamilton Street, Hyattsville, Maryland, for the following bonds of the Washington Suburban Sanitary District, dated July 1, 1948: $2,000,000 Series "SSS" bonds, maturing annually, July 1, $50,000 1949 to 1988, inclusive, without option of prior payment, to be issued under the authority of Chapter 122 of the Acts of 1918 of the General Assembly of Maryland, as amended, for water main and sewer construction. Denomination $1,000; principal and semi-annual interest (J and J 1) payable at Prince Georges Bank and Trust Company, Hyattsville, Maryland, or at The Equitable Trust Company, Baltimore, Maryland, or at Chemical Bank and Trust Company, New York City, New York, at holder's option; general obligations; unlimited tax; coupon bonds registerable as to principal alone; exempt from taxation by the State of Maryland and by the counties and municipalities in said State; unconditionally guaranteed as to both principal and interest by Montgomery and Prince George's Counties by endorsement on each bond; form of bonds substantially the same as bonds of the last preceding series. There will be no auction. Bonds will be delivered about August 11, 1948, at place of purchaser's choice. No bid may name more than three interest rates and all bonds maturing on the same date must bear interest at the same rate. No bid of less than par and accrued interest for less than all of the bonds offered will be entertained. In the event that prior to the delivery of the bonds the income received by private holders from bonds of the same type and character shall be taxable by the terms of any Federal income tax law, the successful bidder may, at his election, be relieved of his obligations under the contract to purchase the bonds and in such case the deposit accompanying his bid will be returned. The approving opinion of Messrs. Mitchell and Pershing, New York City, will be furnished the purchasers without cost. Crisis Precipitated by Good Humor Man

I understand that Parkfairfax is splitting up into two armed camps—the pro-honkers and the anti-honkers.

It all started when the Good Humor man honked his horn to let prospective customers know he was in the vicinity.

Some people objected to the honking, others didn't. The anti-honkers went to the police, the police gave the Good Humor man a ticket, and told him to stop honking.

So the Good Humor man made his rounds in silence, and his business got worse and worse because he was no longer able to advertise his presence.

Now the anti-honkers are satisfied, but the pro-honkers think it's a dirty shame to ruin a guy's business just because of a few discreet honks.

Pending the appointment of a U. N. commission to investigate, Parkfairfax remains torn with dissension.

Pravda hasn't taken sides yet. The Russians are probably trying to decide whether they should lash out at "the brutality of the imperialist police," or at the Good Humor man, who is "obviously a capitalist and a tool of the dairy trust."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Intelligent female cat, 1 year old." (Adams 9392.)

"Two very playful kittens." (Dupont 8246.)

TREASURER'S REPORT

J. Wallace Rion of Roads End Farm, Catharpin, Va., writes:

"The children in our neighborhood have given a show, and they want the proceeds to go to Children's Hospital. Will you please see that the inclosed check for $2.05 is turned over with the best wishes of Jimmy Young, Peggy Elliott, Walter Weber and Helen Rion?"

Will do—and thanks. Streetcar tokens for the hospital have been received from:

Six-year-old Joel Stempil of 3905 Ames st. ne. (who prints a beautiful letter); Marcia Litman of 124 Wayne pl. se.; C. E. Manley, CSK, USNR, Navy Annex, Arlington, Va.; Elizabeth Tangen of Fairfax, Va. (who sends in a 6-month-old check which she forgot to cash); Leila Thompson; Jessie Benton Fremont of 2310 Connecticut ave. nw.

Jill Gacey of 2120 16th st. nw.; Dorothy E. Baker of 1229 N. Taylor st., Arlington, Va. (who is still cheerful and interested in the welfare of others in spite of her broken back); the gang at the G. C. Murphy store at 1214 G st. nw. (they keep finding tokens on the floor there); "Becky" Jo Peake of 715 S. Washington st., Alexandria, Va. (she's 15 months old, so Mommy handles her token business for her).

Mrs. L. M. Fisher, Garrett Park, Md. (cash, too); Mrs. Samuel J. Hoexter of 3206 Wisconsin ave. nw. (war stamps); Bill Blanken; the folks at 4915 30th pl. nw.; and Verona Z. Ruhl of 6916 New Hampshire ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Incidentally, a check for $2.54 is en route to the Crusade for Children, courtesy of David Wood of 2909 Brandywine st. nw., his sister Carol, and "two friends named Greer and Peggy."

All are 9 years old except Carol, who is 7. The kids picked wildflowers, put them in Dixie cups filled with water, and then used David's wagon to haul their wares from door to door throughout the neighborhood.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

That old advertising slogan "I love a man who smokes a pipe" was probably financed by the match industry.

LIFE-IS-LIKE-THAT DEPT.

Some day, when I get the world's lesser problems settled, I'm going to make another try at understanding women.

For example, there's the matter of consistency. A woman who arrives at a party and finds herself wearing the same kind of hat or dress as another woman is mortified.

But this same gal will insist that she's got to have a fur coat — "because all the other girls have fur coats."

HOW OLD IS YOUNG?

According to this story, one of the reporters who covered Lincoln's historic speech was named John Russell Young.

NEW Scientific Treatments
Help You to GROW THICKER HAIR

Upon Nature's innate system of growth is based Hair Experts' specialized system . . . a plan that results in thicker hair NATURALLY grown and nurtured to full strength and virility with the aid or modern scientific formulae.

First, the scalp is thoroughly and professionally cleansed of its dandruff and other disorders, through special, gentle but effective germicides which penetrate below the skin surface to attack the source of the infection and then reopen clogged passages.

When the basic cause of the scalp trouble is routed, Hair Experts begin the rejuvenating treatments. After energizing the papilla to action, and then creating a fertile "field" for that growth, Hair Experts special formulae (scientifically created by and for them) stimulate the sub-scalp hair growth to normal, natural length, strength and thickness. Then sluggish blood circulation is normalized to flood the hair follicles with life-giving "food" for hair growth. Come in IMMEDIATELY for a free private scalp examination. Relax under our pleasant, professional treatments and care that helps revitalize hair to virile activity.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Max Gordon, the producer, saw Billy Rose mounted on a horse and announced: "This is the end of Capitalism." . . . Jack Straus, president of R. H. Macy, was introduced to Merlyn S. Pitzele, the labor editor of Business Week, and told him: "I'm glad to meet you. You know, I've always wanted to be a labor expert," Pitzele replied: "That's strange. I've always wanted to be president of Macy's."

Ambassador Stanton Griffis invited 50 of his friends to see the Louis-Walcott fight with him. They came to his Sutton place home for dinner. Two buses waited downstairs to take them to Yankee Stadium to see the fight. Then the fight was postponed until the next day. . . . Griffis invited the same 50 to dine the next night at the 21 Club. The same two buses were parked outside, to take his guests to the fight. And at dinner came the news of the second postponement. "If these postponements continue," said the ambassador, "I'll go broke. So here you are—for whenever the fight is held," he announced, and distributed a ringside ticket to each of his guests.

The head of a large Hollywood studio was described by one of his friends: "He looks like a betrayed owl" . . . Al Capp, the cartoonist, has agreed to write a book. The only question he asked of the literary agent who brought the offer was: "Would the book have a stiff cover? It will? Good. I've always wanted to see my work published in something that wasn't used to wrap fish 15 minutes after it hit the street."

The Duke of Windsor no longer uses the Windsor knot, in tying his four-in-hand. And the tail of his tie hangs 4 inches lower than the top part.

State Senator Elmer Quinn is opposed to the legislation which would give immunity to newspapermen who refuse to reveal their source. "A bad newspaperman isn't entitled to it," he insists, "and a good newspaperman doesn't need it."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Hannegan's Advice Bottled Up

By Drew Pearson

Bob Hannegan, the man who made Harry Truman, had lunch with his former boss in Washington just a week ago. Since he retired as Postmaster General and became head of the St. Louis Cardinals, Hannegan has seen little of the President. However, he hoped at this luncheon to tell him frankly that he had no chance to win next November.

HANNEGAN

However, court jester George Allen is now chuckling over the fact that Hannegan never got a chance to open his mouth. Hannegan is quite a talker; so, perhaps suspecting what was coming, Truman had the scene all set.

Genial George, the gentleman from Mississippi, originally appointed to the White House secretariat on the recommendation of Hannegan, was at the luncheon apparently to monopolize the conversation. Long ago he and Hannegan broke. In fact, Hannegan tried to get Allen euchred out of the White House because of his reactionary influence.

During the luncheon conversation, Truman described Governor Dewey as a "pushover." He was cocksure and full of confidence. Senator Taft, he admitted, was the man he preferred as the Republican candidate, but Dewey would be just as easy.

Hannegan had come prepared to give his former boss a careful analysis of the political situation. He was going to tell him frankly that he should double the current talk about defection in the Democratic Party. And when it came to reports of defeat, he should triple them. But Hannegan never had a chance. He wasn't asked anything. And, somewhat miffed, he didn't volunteer anything.

Almost as if to prevent Hannegan's advice, Truman volunteered this amazing statement:

"Connelly and Allen are my best political brains."

Anyone who has a speaking acquaintance with Matt Connelly, the presidential secretary, and George Allen, partner of GOP National Treasurer James Kemper, knows that when it comes to campaign strategy, they are as spunky as a dishrag.

Hannegan departed, vowing never to come back to Washington until January, 1949.

Democratic Roll Call

Democratic bigwigs are starting for their Philadelphia convention with more dismal faces than in the last 24 years. Just one week before they settle down to the serious business of picking a leader to buck the formidable Dewey-Warren ticket, here is a cross-section of how the men who put Harry Truman in office now think about his renomination:

Bob Hannegan—You can't put a bush-leaguer in against a big-leaguer. The crowds get wise. I couldn't do it on my baseball team, and the Democratic Party can't do it with the voting public. There are four men around Truman who are a menace to America. They have him coked up so he thinks he can win.

Ed Kelly, former Mayor of Chicago—Justice William O. Douglas and General Eisenhower are both fine men, well equipped to lead the country.

Senator Barkley of Kentucky—Unenthusiastic but loyal.

Former Speaker Sam Rayburn—Worried. A lot of good men will be snowed under in the congressional election if Truman heads the ticket.

Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh, Pa.—Pennsylvania Democrats are rebelling against Truman.

Ed Flynn, boss of the Bronx—Will sit this one out. No use talking to Truman. He's got his back up and nothing can change him.

Senator Brien McMahon of Connecticut—If the Democratic Party is snowed under in November, the two-party systems will be weakened if not jeopardized, not for four years but for 12 years.

Truman and Ed Kelly

Chicago Democratic leaders tell this story of how Ed Kelly, who served for years as Mayor of the Windy City, finally bowed out.

Kelly, who had carried Chicago for himself and FDR three different times, wanted to run again and remained blissfully ignorant of the fact that he had slipped politically. Precinct leaders were clapping him on the back, telling him how popular he was, then go to the office of Jack Arvey to report that Kelly couldn't possibly win.

After various surveys substantiated the latter view, Arvey finally went to Kelly. He dreaded the visit, but without beating around the bush, told the venerable mayor that all the political surveys showed he couldn't win.

Kelly didn't hesitate.

"I'm not bigger than my party," he said. "I'll be glad to step out. Who else have we got?"

Arvey then proposed Martin Kennelly, got Kelly's enthusiastic O. K. and then went round to see Kennelly. At first Kennelly acted like Eisenhower, said he wasn't a candidate, didn't think he should run, wanted to know if he would have to face a primary battle. When primary opposition finally was withdrawn, Kennelly agreed to take the nomination. He is doing an outstanding job as Mayor of Chicago today.

Your Hair Grows Faster in Summer

"It is a well known phenomenon that in the summer the growth of hair is more rapid," says Dr. Arnold Lorand, Vienna Dermatologist.

THAT hair grows faster in the summer than at any other season is a scientific observation made by various authorities. Why not take advantage of this seasonal peculiarity by starting now to give your hair the care and attention which it deserves?

First, let Thomas remove those dandruff scales which may be causing your scalp itch. A Thomas expert can also tell you how and when to expose your hair to the sun and what to do about excessive perspiration on the scalp. Come in and see for yourself why a quarter-million other persons have turned their scalp problems over to Thomas experts. Consultation and advice is gladly given (in private) without charge or obligation.
